or here otatine ople who publish inflammatory material about D give gious groups apparently can do so with impunity, if week's edition of the 'Listener' is anything to go by. omeonexander Fry's article entitled 'The Sword of Islam' is haps one of the worst examples of outright inflam-hassles tory anti-Moslem material seen in a widely circulated y enterw Zealand magazine for some time. The most distressaspect of it, perhaps, is that the 'listener' may get away wholth it as the article talls neither under the jurisdiction n workthe Human Rights Act, nor the Race Relations Act. he main thrust of the article is an articulation of the interferddle East, who was in New Zealand for a three week r late last year. His qualifications, as a speaker on the ut that dele East 'issue', however, are somewhat questionable. look a ording to the New Zealand Israel Information tre, Laffin has a MA in Politics, and an ncern thary doctorate in literature from a college in the upisex - hardly a convincing testimony for his 'Middle expertise? Although a prolific writer of over books nearly all of which are fiction, there appears be an absence of any indication that he has studied, e goin for that matter, lived in, the Middle East for any minulesonable length of time.

much for the 'expertise' Laffin claims to represent the lashat about the arguments put forward :

memong New Zealand's small Muslim community there sleepers', agents that will be activated when the time tation hight' vrite and at New Zealand is a soft target which militant funnentalists want to make a genuine House of War target-See Yollfor conversion to Islam'. Inflammatory stuff - especialon varief you are a Muslim but that is only the start. As well defining often quite complex issues into a purely 're all gious context which is both misleading and inaccurate, ne of his statements are just outrageously false, e.g. ere is not a single academic work by a Muslim about ristianity'.

hat is inexcusable is that almost all of these statements e been printed without seemingly any attempt to verify ir accuracy. Further, no attempt appears to have been de to solicit the views of local Muslim leaders. It is zood as if Laffin had written the article himself.

so inexcusable was what was omitted and left unsaid. fact that Laffin's book 'The Arab Mind' was deemracist' by the Race Relations Office, did not seem to ant a mention by Alexander Fry. Nor, it seems, did events and storm of controversy that surrounded his of New Zealand, where his credibility was brought e Christchurch Press reports how the President of the d Muslim society was forbidden to enter an apparently lic meeting of the Friends of Israel because Laffin 'did want Moslems in the audience. Manfred Ropschitz, anti-Zionist Jewish activist gives us perhaps a more ng picture of Laffin and his views. It is worthwhile nuote here from the 'Middle East International' azine (24/11/86), which was unfortunately not rted in New Zealand. oschitz was describing the wave of controversy which ounded Laffin's tour of New Zealand: something ander Fry inexplicity failed to report -: 'Laffin's mfall came in a commercial radio 'phone-in' pronme in Auckland. Following a series of hostile phone to Laffin, the host of the programme read out some he worst sections of the 'Arab Mind', substituting ori' for 'Arab' and inviting listeners to comment. the Maori is not really an individual, not a person he Maori is a natural liar ... only by understanding Maori can we help him to expel those devils which e him'... The effect was stunning. All Laffin's subsent engagements were cancelled and he hastily quit the iis, I think, accurately reflects Laffin's true colours. her than being the 'peace emissary', and 'unbiased cialist' on the Middle East he masquerades as, article has to be one of the worst diatribes against a yous community for some time. It is, in addition, exnely unfortunate that his extreme views have been given prominence by appearing in such a reputable azine as the Listener.

he effect this has had on the Moslem community is gic. Not only does it reinforce and perpetuate negative reotypes of Islamic people which have been around in New Zealand public discourse for some time, but it left few avenues for redress for the Muslim community

Because the 'Listener' article is criticizing a religious minority and not an 'ethnic' or 'national' group, it falls neither under the Race Relation Act nor the Human Rights Act. It has left the Muslim community with little avenues open to correct, what can only be characterised, as slander against themselves and their religion. In effect, the limited checks and balances controlling what has been written in New Zealand's media, has given the Listener one may argue, a licence to defame.

Alexander Fry's subtitle is perhaps half-right. Instead of making us a 'target for Muslim attentions' it should instead read 'New Zealand's ignorance of Islam makes us a target for anti-Muslim diatribes.

EXECUTIVE BY-ELECTION

Here are your candidates for this week's executive by-election. There is only one candidate for each position, but there is still the option of No Confidence if you don't like a candidate, or No Vote if you don't know.

Also on the ballot sheet is a referendum to determine whether or not the executive members get paid. Presently all executive members except the four officers are paid nothing. The motion, to which you can vote YES, NO, or NO VOTE, is as follows:

'THAT the portfolio holders of Executive each shall receive an honorarium of $25 per week nett for the academic year; this honorarium to commence from this date; and for the amount to be indexed to changes in the Tertiary Study Grant.'

To vote, all you need is your student I.D. Card, and to present yourself at one of the polling booths listed below.

For Cultural Affairs Officer, Carl Fagan

Cultural Affairs is about kicking some life into the usually grey regime of labs, lectures, and academia. It has developed over the years from something of a pretentious position to a far more vibrant and living affair, which is how it should be, an accurate reflection of a living, vibrant culture. Culture on campus is not only about old pictures, old music, and even older ideas. Culture is being created all the time - at Elam, the music studios, and in our fostering of new ideals and values.

A lateral approach and an inventive attitude are essential for getting the ideas off paper and onto your social itinerary. Mindblowing events such as Capping, Cerebral Rinse and Cultural Mosaic are co-ordinated by the C.A.O. plus a lot of other great stuff to bridge the gaps between festivities during the year.

Given the opportunity I intend to carry on the essential qualities of eccentricity and grammatical incompetence combined with a sense of cultural awareness that in the past have proved to be the skills necessary for a creative Cultural Affairs officer.

HARD TO FIND CAFE

The Hard to Find Cafe is found in 47 High St (quite easily actually.)

My two work associates and I entered at 6pm (right when it opens) and were promptly seated in a cosy corner at a plain wooden table.

Service was good, our waiter pleasant. He gave us sufficient time to order without being too slow about it.

Our Entree was plain Nachos (a type of crispy cracker) with cheese and chilli. For $3.85 this entree meant for one served the three of us admirably although the other two had a basket of Garlic bread to supplement themselves with as well.

Our main courses were for my two meat eating associates Beef Enchiladas and Salad.

The main courses ranged in price from $10.95 to $12.95. You could have Taco's as well. The fillings you could choose from were chicken, spiced beef, minced beef, refried bean and vegetarian.

The salads the other two had looked attractive, exciting and filling. In fact it was so filling that they couldn't finish it all off and had to leave generous remains for the poor. But they could still find room to tuck in their teeny tums a delicious chocolate mousse and homemade fruit pie, both of which looked scrumptious or in the words of one of my dinner companions 'it was o.k. I guess'. He did however tuck away all of the chocolate mousse.

I, gentle reader, had the refried beans and the Mexican - styled rice. These were both side dishes which cost about $3.00 each and were tum filling for me too! The decore was adequate.

All in all, I think you will gather that I am going to highly recommend the Hard to Find Cafe as a place for students on a paupers income to eat like royalty. (I would say King but I've had it up to the teeth with being called sexist).

Banqueting on a Bursary

Ice-cream is one of my passions so here is my favourite

BRANDY AND CHOCOLATE ICE-CREAM

You need:

3 egg whites 1/2 cup sugar 2 Tbsp brandy 1 dessertsp cocoa

½ pint whipped cream a little hot water Beat egg whites stiffly. Add sugar and beat well. Add whipped cream and stir lightly. Divide mixture in half. Add the brandy to one half and the cocoa dissolved in hot water to the other half.

Put alternate spoonfuls into an ice-cream tray. Do not stir An alternative to the brandy half: use rum and raisins.

COURSE CHANGE

Two weeks of lectures have been and gone and some of you may feel that your workload is too light. Well today is the final day for additions to most Bachelors degrees with the exception of Arts and Music which allow additions up until the 31st March (Tuesday).

Deletions to courses must be in for the 31st March for those who have decided that your course or parts of it are totally incomprehensible then today is the last day to withdraw from any of your papers without having it counted against you. After this date withdrawal is noted on your academic record is counted as a year of study for exclusion purposes and as a fail for grants so if you think you don't want to continue with your course change before then.

Fees: These are $11.00 plus $4.40 per week for late application for additional papers only including GST.

Remember if you are going to drop a paper it must go through Registry preferably before the 31st.

MAIDMENT PLAY

THE SUICIDE by Nikolai Erdman

Opening Thursday 12th March and playing each evening at 8.15pm until 21st March. At the Maidment Theatre, directed and designed by Murry Lynch. Far from being a depressing play, The Suicide (banned 1932) is a brilliant and penetrating satirical comedy from Russia. The play centres on an unemployed 'little man', Semyon, who contemplates suicide and is besieged by spokespeople of discontented groups, from butchers to intellectuals, who want him to turn his suicide into a gesture on their behalf. 'Nowadays, only the dead may say what the living think' as one of the characters says.

What ensues is not only a lively farce but also a passionate (if a comical one) plea for the little man against the bureaucratic state.

Nickolai Erdman's genius was recognised by his contemporaries. Brecht was enthusiastic about an earlier play, and Stanislavsky and Meyerhold competed to present The Suicide. Permission to put the play on was given after Gorki had pleaded with Stalin. Nevertheless, after eighteen months rehearsal the play was not allowed to open. The Suicide which has been called 'the best play in the Soviet repertory', has never been performed in the USSR: it was staged with huge success in 1978 by the Royal Shakespeare Company.

The Maidment Theatre production features Raymond Edkins (who will be remembered for Cloud Nine and Absurd Person Singular recently) as the Little Man. John Curry, Siobhan Crowley, Anatoly Frusin, Maggie Harper, Caroline Hutchison, Peter McIntyre, Graeme Moran, Marcus Rishworth, David Stott, Amanda Tollemache and Alison Wall play the family and discontents who make Semyon's life more complicated.

Tickets are all $7 from the door.

COMPLETE GENTLEMAN REDUCED TO SKULL: Shadow puppets in 'Down The Really Road'.

DOWN THE REALLY ROAD

Performed by the committed, a newly formed company of an alternative style of theatre that involves the use of non-conventional theatre spaces. This is one of the reasons that the performance will take place in the grounds of the University School of Architecture, Symonds St.

The Committed prefer to work from a central idea, involving the various art forms from the outset: Movement, gesture, sound, lighting and scenery are all means by which ideas are conveyed. The location used becomes more than a venue, it adds to the concepts and may in fact be the starting point for further development.

The companys founding piece, TO HAVE AND TO HOLD, which took place in the old Jewish Synagogue used the atmosphere as an important aspect of the performance.

Down The Really Road is derived from the writings of Amos Tutuola, the first black Nigerian writer to be published. From The Palm Wine Drinkard, comes the story of The Complete Gentleman. The text is only a starting point, rather than a literal interpretation. In the same way that Amos Tutuola interpreted old African stories.

The presentation of these ideas will take many forms: written text, movement, mask, shadow puppets and live music. The set design will combine with the natural environment: trees, bridges etc, to add to the atmospheric nature of the performance.

Directing the piece is Nansi Thompson, who both directed and appeared in To Have And To Hold. For this show she is working in collaboration with producer Shona Roberts and playwright Stuart Mckenzie.

The performance goes on with the financial assistance of the Northern Regional Arts Council and the QEII Arts Council, and is in association with Public Works. It is an Auckland Fiesta event.

Performance times are 8.30pm for four nights, 18 to 21st March, admission by donation, bring a cushion, if we it will be postponed.

THE GREAT NORML DANCE

Is this a club called NORML or NORMleafL? It doesn't really matter how you interpret the name, but enough of this sensibility. Let's now cross live to our reporter at the dance, who wrote the rest of this review on the actual

Yes kids this was the big one. The strangely unique sole Cafe dance this Orientation. Heaps of people were there, like heaps you know? Three bands played away. The much awaited MLF visited during the first band, jazz they were. Following the MLF visit, the band sounded bloody amazing and all creatures present were getting into it.

This reviewer took time out to play 'Pin Bot' at Funball City and that I can assure you, was a cosmically freaky experience. 'Pole Position' seemed so much better during a NORMleafL dance. Back we came, and noticed Her Royal Majesty's constabulary hassling dance-goers as they crossed Albert Park. The blue lads left later though, with no heavy scenes reported.

Furthermore the reggae band was absolutely outstandingly 'freaky'. I know I've said this word 'freaky' before, but no other word even comes close to being a substitute word for 'freaky' As it can't be described by anything else, the word 'freaky' is itself 'freaky'.

NOT THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Hi, apathetic yuppie, middle-class elitist.... 'FRIENDS'. This week I cruised out and I relaxed. I know you're paying me, but hey guys you can afford it in your Keith Matheson Jean-makers windcheaters and your Sassoon jeans, which is fine I'm into string singlets personally. Between consumption of various plant lifes and playing around with others in the Quad and inevitably myself, I managed to waste another couple of thousand dollars of 'stupid sputniks' I mean students fees, on some pamphlets about myself and other megla-maniacs. It is our fear as the intellectual force modelled on Rambo that you the moronic masses who's only intelligent move was to put me here upon my throne are no longer kissing the ground we walk on, no longer overwhelmed by charismatic lies, no longer cheering on and applauding our arduous life of sacrifice broken only intermittently by votes to give ourselves free 'drinkies'. This is a worry, I see my seat grow cold and empty without the presence of its true sovereign leader's .... bum. For this reason we are spending your money so that you will like us, for the peace of mind of the Sally Field's amongst us, and to maintain us in our glory forever and ever Amen. Ahem! sorry about that E.U. I get confused sometimes.

This year is an election year, as is every year at the Auckland University Students Association and the issues may be crucial to the survival of life as I know it. However I would just like to mention the small, insignificant drop in the cean, petty, unimportant trifling barely noticeable skirmish that will be staged between someone Lange and Jim whats-his-name. In this election the forces of middle and middle that think Nukes are O.K. will meet. I personally believe it is essential that we vote for the opposition as they too make impossible promises and have heard of Kojak psychology (lollipops) and I can relate to this man, heavy. I also feel that to be human is to err, and to be truly human is to want to blame someone else for your mistakes, or ineffectiveness. Hence, thus, therefore, I would like to say we have represented as well as could be expected in regards to tertiary grants and of course it is the government that has refused to see the necessity of extracting revenue from health, primary school education and housing so that students can afford to buy the eight different breeds of Cafe pie - the swine.

I hope you're all settling into varsity the way I'm settling into another year on executive - monopoly made fun!
To sign off, my loyal mindless cretins, I mean supporters, I would say stay wasted till after exams, or stay cool till after school.

SECRETARY APPALLED AT DISCOUNT BOOK

Further investigation into this year's disappointing student discount book has revealed that the majority of blame for the poor quality of the book lies with the AUSA executive. It was they after all who decided to print a discount book long after the sensible deadline for decision had passed. In October 1986 the executive turned down a proposed discount book on the grounds that there was not enough time to do the job properly. Weeks later the executive changed their mind, and the ill-fated book was started on its journey.

The book contained 73 discounts which are not available to all Auckland University Students, and so should not have been included. The book was based on a computer printout of discounts supplied by TISA CARD, a list which included discounts both for all students and for TISA CARD holders only. ausa had the right to edit this list, and so produce a discount book in accordance with the discount book agreement. AUSA failed to edit the book because not enough time was left to produce the book efficiently.

The fault for this year's discount book lies with the executive members who voted to produce such a book, for in their haste they did not think beyond politics and into organisation.

EXEC MEMBERS HOLIDAY AT STUDENT EXPENSE

Ever tried to contact your Student Welfare Officer lately, don't bother, he hasn't been in, and won't be in until Easter - real nice if you want to discuss bursary hassles today!

It seems Mr Heriot has found that work and being a Student Rep too much of a strain, and decided that in all Fairness Student problems rate second to his own job. According to the rules, if you can't do your job on Exec you resign and let someone who can take over. But Mr Heriot decided to just take a holiday instead - and what's more the Exec allowed him!

Not to be out done our SRC Chairman Mr Barriball has also found trouble fitting his elected position into his work schedule and has obtained a five week break from chairing the weekly SRC meetings. Seems strange that Mr Barriball was elected to the position with the knowledge that his presence was required each Wednesday lunch time and now opting out because he can't fit it in. What's even stranger is the way Exec allows this to continue.

To continue on the SRC vein, seems Mr Chapman our Student Media Officer also can't make the weekly SRC because it interferes with his studies. Now each student Exec member has to attend SRC meetings, this is stated in the rules. This rule allows the Exec members to be held accountable for His/Her actions before the student body at large. Now not only has Mr Chapman been granted leave of the SRC's but the leave is for the entire year.

So it now makes 3 Exec members who can't fulfil their obligations to the Exec or the students.

BILLY MEETS DAVID

There was a certain incongruity in David Lange up at Billy Bragg's concert.

"Lange" could have been substituted for "Thate most of the songs. This is the incongruity though. The campaign Thatcher by electing a Labour government does New Zealand. It's more than Labour being divort the people. Labour is doing Thatcher's work here.

That campaign has emerged out of three years fights and defeats. The actions against cruise misminers' strike and the battle with Murdoch at saw thousands of people in direct confrontation, for their livelihoods, with Thatcher's monetaridefeats put before people the need for political 'Wearing badges is not enough' BB sings. ## RUSSELLS LITTLE

The Question of User Pays may seem strange to the average university student right now. Haven't you just spent heaps of money in student fees and books? If User Pays comes into action you'd wonder what'd hit you. Russell Marshall Minister of Education has been raising the issue of Cost Recovery after treasury department officials first came up with the idea of hitting the students after they graduate.

$5000 per year

How? The government will charge students for their education. At the moment the yearly cost is an average $5000 for the government to educate a full-time student. This varies from $3000 per year for commerce to $11,000 for engineering. Right now you're only paying $250, if that. Under cost recovery proposals you would be hit for the whole lot!

Mr Marshall does believe in education though, he even believes no one can have too much of it. But he isn't too sure that everyone can get equal opportunity to achieve that education. This is where Russells little Plan takes over, he lends everyone the money to go to university and when your out in the workforce earning lots of money with your new degree you can pay it all back. Sounds simple enough?

How would you pay that cost? Proponents of the 'Cost Recovery' system could argue that the costs are compensated for by the enhanced earning potential of the graduate, but this argument is not as clear-cut as it might seem. New Zealand's egalitarian traditions have tended to set small margins for advanced qualifications. It is not surprising that many university graduates do not recoup their investment in tertiary education until their mid-careers.

55% STUDENTS FROM PRO-FESSIONAL FAMILIES

"User pays" tends to assume that the capacity to pay is relatively equal. This is evidently not so. In education such an assumption would be especially damaging. Maxpa Marshall cites the 1984 Victoria roll where 55% of the Yet t students came from professional families, this sector maleduca ing up only 14% of the New Zealand workforce. Mr Madent shall now sees the university education as something the b a class privilege. Especially when the university cost source the tax payer is around 18% of the education budgeterin despite only having 5% of the students. There is nothin The to suggest that the participation of lower income groupribute would be encouraged by the 'Cost Recovery' system. Byhe h given the detrimental effect loans have had on lower isconor come groups overseas, and the close relationship betweenose ethnic identity and socio-economic status in New Zealanion ha these adverse effects are likely to fall most heavily by Maori students. Overseas experience in Canada and the United State octors has shown that the students unable to front up with the ason cash either drop out, cut back to being part-timers tate. So choose 'safe' courses that will pay the massive loans the New need to cover their education. Experience in British Columbia, Canada has shown tBut as the average student leaves university with a debt mall pr $NZ40,000. What happens when you consume more the lower your $40,000, shouldn't you have to pay it?

In the words of the Minister of Finance, Roger Dougline and 'Where students study for reasons of personal interest. Other activities undertaken purely for pould be sonal interest such as visiting the cinema or playing sphility to are generally paid for by the individual themselves (secess has

'S BARYSPHERE

Life After Orientation?

This week Brad uses the Iull in social events to reflect on Orientation 87 and then looks forward to what's coming up this year.

Now that you younguns have been orientated to some of the possible activities on and off Campus it's time for this years controllers to catch up on about a months worth of sleep that they missed. Some criticise controllers only too quickly not realising the soul draining work that goes into organising the two week non-stop festival. My thanks go to Debbi, Biddy, Clare and the rest of this years crew for a great Orientation.

Events this year I think worth raving about include Billy Bragg, the NORML Dance, Herbs, The Bats, The Mardi Gras and The Happy Accident. The Happy Accident in the Maidment Theatre brought together an incredibly wide range of performers into one billing to give an event that I was annoyed at myself for missing. This years Mardi Gras ended a bad run in AUSA Mardi Gras history as the last successful one was run in 1983, as a large crowd turned out and enjoyed it. Finally the Galaxy gigs all pulled good crowds. Taking these events off campus is now seen to be justified from the financial point of view and for their ease of organisation, but it just didn't seem to be Orientation without having to wait in long queues, breath the choking cafe air and fight for a position to see the bands.

Election year, which always causes all sorts of weird going ons.

So what's next on the social calendar? Well there's the usual rush of flat warmings, a few overseas acts lined up and Capping is just around the corner. Overseas acts coming include Shriekback, Hunters & Collectors, The Damned, The Johnnys and The Pretenders. And this year is of course election year, which always causes all sorts of weird going ons. This election should be an interesting one, will the workers stick with the Labour Govt? Will the millionaires back the Labour? Do the farmers have enough money even to get petrol to get to the polls? These and many other questions will no doubt be answered later this year.

So all and all, it's looking like another busy year is all lined up so keep tuned in.

Yours in hunt of the next live acts

THE MOTOR ORACLE

Shut your eyes and pick out any letter with a pin or pencil point. At the same time, hold a map in your left hand. Some piece of great good fortune will come to you while riding in a motor car, or other vehicle, having the chosen letter as one of its index letters.

SAGITTARIUS

Half human, half horse; half man, half beast like the editors of Craccum. You combine the high idealism of evolved man (the archer aims at high spiritual targets) with the largest sexual apparatus of any in the zodiac.

It is the work of your incarnation in this ninth sign of the zodiac (it's later than you think) to learn steadiness, subtlety, modesty, high resolution and carefulness. Read your old school reports for your karmic briefing.

This is a big, bounding, boisterous sign, the sign of getting drunk and behaving boldly in restaurants. Ideas come to you with such force that you have to express them at once, and this can get you a reputation for thoughtlessness. Tact is not in your armory of social talents. So you Sagittarians swing about the street through your teens, behaving noisely, clapping along, talking too loudly, boastfully looking after the derelicts on K. Road. With your walkman playing 'The Chills' directly into your brain, you may come to believe that life out there is happening on a screen. It's all a multidimensional screen experience, and you are its hero. This translates into legal language as guilty but insane!

Women say to Sagittarian men 'You don't want an equal relationship with a proper woman you just want some silly dolly bird saying how fantastic you are all the time!' Most women say that to men, but in your case there is just cause. Women Sagittarians are likely to ask men at parties 'Wanna play gynaecologists?'

CAPRICORN

Capricorn is symbolized by the Goat, the least attractive beast in the Zodiac.

The mode of the Goat is a climbing one and those born under the Goat are driven to ever higher things. Capricorns love to look down on their fellows, insects in the distance, with a profound sense of superiority. The Goat-purpose of their ascent is not clear. Perhaps for spiritual ambition, or perhaps for social authority; quite often just for better gossip. However, it is never for the Zen pleasure of climbing, and in this we see the fatal flaw in the Capricorn character.

Yours is the sign of Victorian values thrift, self-improvement and regular bowel habits. The twentieth century invention you admire most is the choke chain.

You Capricorns are astoundingly ambitious. You may not give it away, your modest manners and careful sense of debt and duty may conceal it, but you are the most ambitious sign of the Zodiac.

All ambition is empty, and you should realise this though it will probably be too late. You may be dying, before you realise money is crap.

Love strikes as a very rare trenzy and it is not a pleasant feeling the lack of self-control frightens you, the sense of failing autonomy, falling walls, the sense of anxiety and defeat. You liken the physical sensation to some large insect crawling through your lungs, laying its

THE KELLOGS SERIAL

SUMMER OF THE SECOND DIMENSION

from last week

Michael Parkinson's cardboard cutout assumed all the properties of the more common three dimensional Parkinson, but the cutout was of course rather flat. In recognition of this unstandard deviation, the flat Parkinson called himself Mike Cartonson, son of corrugated. Batman had of course been expecting Mike's arrival, illustrated by the prepared blu-tack blobs to stick Mike to the wall. Twodimensioners find it hard to sit on a three dimensional chair, much as your average human finds four dimensional chairs to be a might prickly.

My life as a solid object was about to take a temporary back seat...

With Mike safely blu-facked, and Batman busily drinking his coffee out of his roulette wheel, they explained the mission in store for me. Mike spake only twodimensional language, and he said to me, 'Eenab ooah oaah eeneh eva eeneh'. Never having been to the second dimension, and unaware of the idealogical conflict that this might create, I could only reply. 'Freak me out.'

Mike was unable to translate his gibberish to me, but my temptation for trans-dimensional travel was treated as Batman indicated that my mission was in fact sealed in an envelope. The only problem, warned Batman, was that the aforementioned evelope was four dimensional, and would be, to put it mildly, rather difficult to read in the two dimensional environment to which we were now

My life as a solid object was about to take a temporary back seat (or should I say blu-tack blob) and at last I could visit the Queen and King of Diamonds in their own flat environment.

This philosophical discussion was quite rudely interrupted by the toaster, which was now becoming impatient.

Contributions to 'Camelcomicality' are welcomed. Please type double spaced, and give to David Ward in the Craccum (publications) office.

The purpose of this article is to show you how to grow enough plants to supply all your family needs. It doesn't matter where you live, or even if you are growing your first plant because all the information needed to become a master backyard farmer will be provided in the following months to come.

The world has seen an enormous increase in plant usage in the past ten years. Consequently, many governments have sponsored research in order to understand the nature of the plant as well as its psychoactive compounds substances that are being smoked or ingested by more than 400 million people all over the world - boy, that's a lot of people. You too can be one of these 400 million people.

It's not difficult to do but can be very unnerving when suit-tailored visitors come visiting. Highly potent plants can be grown indoors, as well as in gardens, fields and in the wilds.

Indoor growers must create an environment whereas outdoor gardeners work within the environment. Following these two approaches to cultivation, this article will discuss two separate but parallel parts on indoor and outdoor growing.

Cultivation is not a complicated process; but this can depend on how wasted you are when you wire up your lights. (We hope we have anticipated your questions with solid and clearly stated answers, if not, questions can be answered by writing to c/- Craccum).

There are probably as many ways to grow plants as there are farmers. We hope to impart an understanding of the plants and their cultivation so that you can adapt the knowledge to fit your particular situation - where you live, the land or space available, the time, energy and funds at your disposal.

Modest indoor gardens are quite simple to set up and care for. All the materials you'll need are available at nurseries, garden shops, hardware and lighting stores, or they may be found around the house. The cost will depend on how large or elaborate you make the garden and on whether you buy or scavange your materials. With a little ingenuity the cost can be negligible. It takes about an hour every three or four days to water and tend a medium sized indoor garden.

Outdoors, a small patch in your garden can supply all your smoking needs with little or no expense. Generally they take less care than other crops because of its natural tenacity to and ability to compete with indigenous weeds. Good plants can resist mild frost, extreme heat, deluge and draught. In some areas of the country such as the far north, the plants require no more attention than sowing and then harvesting - but if you're like most growers you'll find yourself spending more and more time in your garden, watching the tiny sprouts emerge and then following their developments into large, lush and finally resinous flowering plants. Nurturing and watching these beautiful plants as they respond can be a humanizing experience. If you already are a plant grower, you may understand. If not follow this article.

Till next week

GARSE PIAGGIO

As you can see this weeks Classic Car isn't a car at all but a scooter. One the good points about Vespas is that they are cheap. And I mean cheap.

The makers of these scooters, Piaggio, were initially an aircraft manufacturer during the war and there is much evidence of this: the front wheel/suspension unit was the same as used on their light aircraft, the teardrop-shaped side panels were the same moulds used for the engine nacelles, and the same design and styling is still evident today in the latest models.

The engine sizes cover the small to medium range, from 50cc (not worth having unless it's given to you) to the new 200cc (120 kph)

Age	cc's	name
1950's	50	super sport super sprint

1970's	180	rally
	200	rally
1982	125	PX
	150	PX
	200	PX

Something to look forward to when you own an old scooter are the rallies. These are when a group of scooter; maniacs conglomerate at a pre-destined place and after a wait of about an hour the collection of vehicles and stragglers departs to places unknown. The first rally I went on included a 'who can get the most alcohol onto their scooter and still manage to drive away' competiton. This included crates on the rear carriers. Going to these are a great way to meet people and make new friends. Travelling in a group of twenty bikes is very exhilarating but can be quite dangerous especially in the wet.

The scooters themselves have many nice features such as spare wheels which can be very useful, and batteryless ignition and lighting for a more reliable scooter.

CHAPLAINS' CHAT MORE INTIMATE THAN A MODERN DAD E nga iwi o te Wananga nei, tena koutou katou!

Many people today are uncomfortable with the notion of God as 'Father'. The term suggests a maleness about God, which, in these liberated days, carries connotations of sexism and patriarchy.

But when Jesus popularised the term it was something of a radical innovation. For Jesus, God was close, personal, loving and indulgent - not a distant, capricious ogre in the sky.

Ironically, Jesus called God 'Father' because he wanted to emphasize what we today might call the feminine characteristics of the deity - warmth, caring, tenderness.

The words we use to describe God are only pointers and symbols. They are not the reality itself. Our task today is to find words that express what we really want to say about God, and that don't carry connotations which are offensive and a stumbling block to others.

This is no easy task. It taxes our brains. People can misunderstand us and accuse us of blasphemy - as they did with Jesus. But one would hope that University Christians would be in the forefront of

THE WOMENSPACE JOURNAL COLLECTIVE

Are you one of the hundreds of women out there who secretly indulge in writing poems, stories, or - heaven forbid doodles? Have you ever wondered if there is some way that you can actually see your work in print? Here's the perfect solution: the Womenspace Journal Collective.

The Womenspace Journal Collective serves two functions:

1. as a place where women can bring their creative writing, read it, discuss it, and find a supportive friendly environment in which to explore and develop their ideas as a writer

2. as a vehicle for publication and performance. In 1985 and 1986 we gave four public readings; one at a Winter Lecture, one at Shadows, and two at the Performance Cafe, the last three being fundraising projects. In 1983 (the first year of the Collective) two journals were published ('Sure to Rise' and 'A Room of our Own'), in 1984 the 'Class of '83' Journal was released, and in 1986 the collective, with almost totally new membership, produced two journals; 'Little Known Hypatia' in Term one, and 'From Where We Stand' in Term two. These two were favourably reviewed by Fiona Kidman in the Listener, along with a book, 'Drawing Together', put out by three members of the 1983 Collective. Between six and ten members took part in the readings, which were purely voluntary. The journals, however, contain workpoems, stories, cartoons and graphics - from as many women as possible. A large number of them never came to meetings and some were not students. There is no fixed ideological standpoint that a contributor must adhere to, either; we hope to get a comprehensive range of ages, races and philosophies in each issue. In short the Journal is an opportunity for any woman at all who would like a chance to publish her work.

Believe it or not, the Womenspace Journal Collective is the only creative writing group on campus that actually publishes the work of any woman who cares to contribute, so long as it is not considered offensive. There is no necessity for a contributor to come to any meetings - any work that you want to put in can be left with Sue Adams, the Womens Rights Officer. (Please include your name and phone number).

journals in 1987, with deadlines for tributions being 1/Easter, and 2/1 July. The lay-up of the books also vides an opportunity for any won who would like to help with production.

GYMNASTICS CLUB

The basis of a gymnastics club was established towards the end of 1986. We are hoping for many new members in 1987 so that the club can begin operating full-scale.

Auckland University has never before had a gymnastics club, nor has it even a primitive set of gymnastic equipment, (even though there is a noticeboard in the Recreation Centre). This is a rather crazy situation to be in, as gymnastics facilities are really an important part of the activities of a university recreation centre.

Aims:

The A.u. Gymnastics club intends to accomplish the following:

(1) To set up an executive capable of running the club efficiently and effectively.

(2) To establish a financial arrangement for the club to purchase a good set of equipment. (In the meantime, equipment hireage will most likely be used).

(3) To establish a good membership and varied club programme based on that membership.

(4) To promote general fitness, by combining aerobic exercises, workouts, etc with the development of gymnastics skills at varying levels.

(5) At a late date, when the club is well established, affiliation to the NZ Gymnastics Association will be considered. General:

The club will cater for a wide range of abilities - from total beginners to advanced gymnasts - and will be open to students, staff and members of the public. Experienced and qualified instructors will conduct small groups and be available for assistance.

Obviously a great deal of work is needed to set up the club; however, we believe that the nec essary determination is present!

We need your membership and support in order that the club will be as successful as we hope it shall.

If you can help with the setting up of the club, or you require some more information, please feel free to contact one of the people listed below:

Rene Flaschman Ph 697-901 Rowan Grayling Ph 834-6355

PLEASE NOTE: ALL FURTHER INFORMATION WILL BE POSTED ON THE GYMNASTICS CLUB NOTICEBOARD IN THE REC CENTRE. Hope to see you along at the first meeting!

DIVE LESSONS

The Auckland University Dive Club has organised another dive course this Starting on the 12th of March, it will cost $150.00, including G.S.T., and will be professionally run by Panmure Underwater Centre. The Dive Club provides these cheap courses to provide some alternative to the expensive courses run by Dive Shops in Auckland.

Full Certification to the Ocean Dives level is achieved upon successful completion of the course.

For further details contact STEVE 863-381.

Or come to club meetings on Tuesday's in the Rec Centre Club rooms.

Saw a strange sight over the weekend. It was athletes grinding their bodies into the ground over an extended period of time. The event happened to be the triathlon held down on the waterfront, but looking at the food stats sheet I was handed, it looked more like eat the 'milk bar' empty. The litres of orange juice alone would have kept some Kerikeri orchard fiscal for a few years. Those crazied with this need to hurt themselves extended to kilos of healthy type food bars and all manner of secret liquids. But wow they could hussle along. Anyone who hasn't seen a triathlon is missing out on a view of some really healthy bodies. The event starts with a swim/ruck/general pummel match. I've been in such a start and it isn't very nice having your goggles kicked off while someone else tries to overtake by climbing up your back.

After a spell in the water you stagger out and attempt a quick transition (that triathlon talk for changing your clothes for the next stage, usually involving lots of staggering around and abusing shoes that won't go on) into cycling. At this stage I didn't bother watching as it headed into the wilds of South Auckland. But to watch all those bikes charge out was just like the old Le Man's starts. The big trouble at this stage was getting cold. In one swim/run race I'd lost contact with my feet for half an hour after the swim which made running an interesting task.

So after all the thousands of dollars of fragile alloy had returned, it was into another transition stage and back out for a run/race/painful stagger. This was where it started to hurt and where all those extra calories in the extra healthy food bars were needed. So it was with some very relieved faces that most finished. Well I always maintained that the best part in such competitions was in the stopping.

Such a view of fine sporting peoples almost caused me to dust off my trusty farmers 10-speed and cruise off down to the pool.

But on a serious note, the triathlon is starting to become a major sporting event, just take a look at all the bikes at varsity. The triathlon has been introduced at both Easter Tournies last year at Christchurch, and at Winter Tournie (though only for females). So it seems we haven't heard the last of the shaven leg brigade.

Dear Peoples,

I would like to complain bitterly about the way in which grants are allocated. The present system of distributing the study grant is based on academic progress rather than need, it is human both to err and to wish to eat. The present system in an insidious manner promotes inequities as it is often those students living away from home who fail to meet the 'more than half of a full time course' requirement having the additional worries of rent and chores, however they are the ones that are most desperately in need of assistance.

At the present time, one upon taking a stroll to the student car park, can be quite surprised at the number of students who have graduated into the Ford Laser, Mazda 323 and Datsun We Are Driven classes. The labels that appear on the jeans of what are class elite that comprise the major these hallowed halls of free educat expensive. feel I should share my years of exocess of charrience with you, both as a student, and o clever for somebody associated with past accums.

chnically, your first issue is poor. The yout is totally without style that you s of liquor (an call your (collective) own. Considerthe number of people associated th the editorial team surely you could me up with something more original. refer you to DAK's (David kpatrick's) year, or previous. Style de past Craccums; individuality akes those years so memorable (1980, 82, 1983). Recent attempts to clone st styles are doomed (eg 1986).

he content is largely nepotistic: dealwith association matters that you e dealt with - matters of general concern (eg Student Rec Centre) were discussed at a shallow level, a greater background on this sort of topic is necessary for most students.

Overall, your first issue, which should have been full of "punch", interest and original concepts left one with a feeling of being half-changed. To regain the support Craccum has enjoyed in the past, you will need to sell your article.

I know most of you, and I therefore believe a critical assessment of your first issue will spur you along. This year will be a true test of the farcical "democracy" involved in Craccum editorial elections. Wish you well.

WOMMINS COMMENT

Dear Craccum,

Well isn't it a jolly piece of luck that I noticed the 'Womins' page of this week's Craccum. Absolutely super tips on where to buy tampons, what a naughty girl I am for smoking and all that rivetingly technical stuff on women and drinking - Golly, thank goodness I've only got a female appetite for white wine (I won't get fat and unsightly in all the wrong places.)

Also isn't it super I didn't want to know 'useful facts' as a girl/sheila/dame/broad on campus. Like where exactly Womenspace is (opp Lower Common Room) or that the Womens Rights Officer (Sue Adams) has an important role as mediator for several womens groups on campus and is a source of general information on support groups, discrimination against women. And it's a jolly good thing too I didn't want to know about sexual harrassment on campus or that 1987 is the first year a person has been employed at university, specifically to deal with sexual harrassment complaints.

And finally thanks for that gem on pregnancy - now I know to cut down on my daily lagers before it affects the quads.

Yours in sisterhood, T. McCallum

NO DANCING

I am appalled at the extent of student apathy that is being displayed in Rudman Gardens these days. Towit the failure of over two hundred students to dance to 'American Pie' (Don McLean). What madness is this?! In my day students would rage with wanton abandon unable to restrain their basic desires to express themselves by no holds barred raging.

The next time we have live music on campus I hope to see you miserable sedintary toerags out there shaking it up big! Okay!

Angry of Rudman

ONCE ONLY?

Dear Everyone,

Let it be known that on Tuesday the third day of March in the year of Our Lord 1987, the tap beer at Shadows was drinkable.

Yay Team!

MIXED PRAISE

Dear Craccum,

Congratulations on the new look Craccum! The colourful covers are great and the preview page and D(G)Ward's humour page are especially good this

Unfortunately I must register my disapproval of the use of the word 'slut' in the Libran section of the horoscopes on p14. This is the sort of sexist terminology that women have been fighting against for years, and the last thing I expected to see in a publication such as yours.

As you are obviously making an effort to be non-sexist in other areas, I can only imagine that it must have been an oversight on the part of the editors. A minimal amount of sensitive editing would have made 'Horoscopes' inoffensive as well as witty.

Yours sincerely Sandra Hawkins

Dear Ms Hawkins,

I try to sensitively edit. My 'slut' in last weeks hororscopes actually referred to both Libran sexes and was NOT being sexist.

Also in reference to your previous letter about my use of the word morons in the contraception article. It was a saying, not a stone throwing exercise. Hoping you'll find nothing else that looks anti-women in future. co-Ed R.L.C. P.S. Are you a Virgo?

SLANDER AGAINST OUR LEADERS?

Dear Draccum,

The letter from Patriotic Southerner (Craccum, March 9) seems to me to be bordering on treason. Mr Southerner has the audacity to suggest that our Great Leader, David R. Lange, LL.B., is not a true socialist as he has a law degree. I should like to inform him that the mere possession or non-possession of a law degree does not affect one's politics in any way. In fact, some of my best friends are law students, and at least one of them is a socialist. My parents have always voted Labour, and so have I, and I am shocked that this Southerner should dare to impute impure motives to the advanced and enlightened financial manoeuvring by the Labour Party. Furthermore, it is unlikely that the rabid National Party would have had the guts to introduce GST if we were unlucky enough to have them rule over us, and it is also incorrect to suggest that there are more KZ-7 fans in that Dairy-Farmpersons' party. All my friends within the Labour Party think KZ-7 is a good scam, though we are all pissed off about the American boat defeating

Perhaps the Patriotic Southerner would like to piss off back to the South Island, secede, and let us true Mainlanders get on with improving life for students in the Hot North.

> Yours faithfully, Ivan the Cool

REPLY TO MOTHER

Dear muvva of sics. re: Mother of six.

Did you conceive as well while waiting at Student Health? Funny thing that happens to quite a lot of patients, it's not very discriminating of them is it, why me! I can't wait either, no self control, you know, weakness of the flesh, ceiling art of whatever.

But what is really wanting to be known is what brand of patience you used. Oh well, doesn't matter I suppose, you know the story, Labour made it a Corporation and threw it to the market forces; to hell with Central Planning, so Student Health is only acting in its own long term interests, who can blame them?

But maybe they got mixed up a bit with you being a Womin and all that. Did you try at the vet's office? They're very good, mum had the cat down there, had a lovely time, bowl of milk after the op, though we had to change the name afterwards.

Changed my name too, after being good solid Aristotelian featherless bi-ped for donks, to A-person, but this seemed a bit airy fairy and a mite discriminating, so I played round with per daughter, perneuter (but that was puss's new name), till I finally got round to being paranoid. Funny thing too, all these names jostling round for something to mean, plays havoc with ostensive theories of reference, perhaps they're getting a little bit too much on the highbrow side of self-definition. It's sort of like putting on sunglasses when contact lenses will do, well, only if you're vain.

Then this new name, Womin, aroused my philological curiosity and so I searced hither and thither for any clues to its identity; encyclopedias, scholarly tomes, etymological dictionaries, all to no avail, until I overheard a rumour while having a sandwich in the engineers cafeteria. It seems, so they have it, a colony of these womin have dug in on a glossy knoll about the pond at Toad Hall, you know, just past the fairy castle on the yellow brick road. Maybe they're the recently mutated species deriving from 'Women', whence I unearthed a mind boggling biological possibility from this philological gem. The spelling, the crafty witches, has magical significance, when the retention of the ovulaird 'O' is combined with the new potency of the symbol 'i' which replaces the much maligned 'cringing kord' symbol 'e'. Was it possible, this new symbolism indicated a generation of hermaphrodites?

Had they achieved in biology what individualism had only managed till now in economics? Excited by this discovery, and wondering whether this selfsufficiency led to alienation and Honda Civics, I set out immediately on my bicycle, only to find, alas, that my flippers slipped off the pedals. However, still undaunted and waiting for the spring thaw, I reflected that these Womin may not indeed be the long lost third sex, uncloven by Zeus, but a mutation coverging toward the male of the anthropoid, Man, you know the one that refuses parturition after mating. Besides, I confided to myself, how can you tell what's driving the Honda City behind the tinted glass.
