Indulgence

Welcome to our super 28-page, lotsa colour issue! As well as being the last issue of term, this is also the Capping and Careers issue - which creates a bit of conflict (if you know anything about Capping tradition).

Craccum is currently being threatened with a massive cut in its grant from AUSA. Craccum relies on this $40,000 grant and on advertising. If this grant was to be cut to $10-$20,000, Craccum would be almost entirely reliant on advertising, which would be the death of Craccum as we know it, particularly since the stockmarket crash. With so much less money around, companies are not willing to spend. Craccum has been feeling the effects of lack of advertising this term, and if it wasn't for the AUSA grant, we'd be down to about 8 pages and struggling.

An argument used by the movers of this motion was to compare Craccum to independent student newspapers like Student Life and Campus News. But there can be no comparison - these magazines come out only every now and then. They are at least 40% advertising, which leaves even less room for articles, etc. Craccum has a policy of having an average of no more than 25% advertising each issue, which is only possible through the AUSA grant. The latest issue of Campus News was only 8 pages long. Craccum is 16-28 pages long, and this is every week!

Craccum is also accessible to all students - you are welcome to contribute and get involved in writing, production, ideas and input, or writing letters. Craccum is also an up-to-date source of information, which tells you week by week what's going on around campus, and in such a large divided university, it's important that there is some form of communication and information.

Anyway, it's too late for this cut in AUSA's grant to be brought about this year, but if this referendum is passed, it would affect future years. You'll hear more about this in the first issue next term so look out for it.

Being Capping Week, make the most of it - this is about the only time all year that you can terrorise Auckland and get away with it (and I don't mean just with the Pub Crawl - remember those things called Capping Stunts!!!)

Crappy Happening... (Whoops!) - Happy Capping!

Craccum is a source of free expression and information for Auckland University Students and anyone else who happens to read it. Craccum is not the official publication of the Auckland University Students Association or the University of Auckland. Neither of these necessarily endorse or agree with opinions expressed in Craccum. In fact, if there is anyone out there who can read or understand anything in Craccum could they please come up to the office and tell us (the Editors, that is) what it's all about, because no one up here has any idea at all.

SLINGS AND ARROWS

Why is the Government Silent On Rat-Chewed Babies?

The news that Prince Charles is concerned with the plight of the homeless in Britain fascinates us. Not a single Government Minister in this country has expressed concern over the plight of the homeless in New Zealand! And their plight is appalling - and growing.

A report by the Housing Network - a social services group which includes the NZUSA - was headlined in the NZ Herald on February 19. It revealed horrifying conditions of babies being chewed by rats in Auckland hovels. Their report showed a simple equation: bad housing = bad health. Yet families with children could not afford doctors. Rent costs were a major factor - 68% of the families surveyed were receiving less than $300 net income a week, and 38% were paying half their income in rent. Spokesperson Sister Mary Foy said it was not unusual to find 20 people living in a two-bedroom house.

Landlords say, renting is their business - they have to make a profit. And as is well-known, they make whatever the traffic will bear which, in times of shortage is plenty.

But that is only part of the picture. Social workers know that there are plenty more people - families and single people - living in cars, garages, old buses, anything that will give them some shelter.

Unemployment goes up by leaps and bounds every week, adding to the misery. Mostly - but not only - it falls on Maori and Pacific Island families, who are the poorest of the poor.

They are not yet sleeping on the public streets as are the poor in the USA and in London. Remember the song, 'Underneath the Arches', about those who used to sleep under London Bridge? Perhaps you thought those days were gone. If they ever were, they're back with a vengeance.

But it won't be long before we find homeless curled in doorways here. And what are the Langes and the Douglasses doing and saying? 'Damn you, Jack, I'm all right!' What they probably will say is: 'That's not our portfolio. Talk to the Minister of Housing, Helen Clark.' Yes, she's in it, too, but so are you all collectively. Don't think you can escape the responsibility with a sickly smile and a turned back. 'One may smile and smile and be a villain,' said Hamlet of his stepfather.

More housing, now, for the poor! That is what is wanted. Not more private profit for the rich. The Government runs the economy. They are in a position to remedy these foul, inhuman conditions. Or stand condemned before the bar of public opinion.

GIBBERONNIE

(With apologies to Lew)

'Twas bearish, and the 'changy coves
Did swire and swindle as they yabbed;
All graspy were the mini-Joves,
And the great gulls outgrabbed.

'Beware the Ronnietrot, my son -
The jaws that bite, the claws that catch;
Beware the Bob-Job bird, and shun
The Brierpipe bodysnatch.'

He took his billion bid in hand,
Long time the banksome foe he sought;
So rested he by the Fortune tree
And hid awhile, caught short.

And as, in borrowed shorts he hid,
The Ronnietrot, with eyes aflame,
Came whistling, 'I've a bigger bid,
And seized the smaller game.

'One two, one two, not quite so fast!
The billion bidder bawled.
'My knight is white, with assets vast.
And off Ron's head he hauled.

'And hast thou slain the Ronnietrot?
Come to my arms, my bearish boy.
Oh, fractious fray, hooroo, hooray!
He chortled in his joy.

'Twas bearish, and the 'changy coves
Did swire and swindle as they yabbed;
All graspy were the mini-Joves,
And the great gulls outgrabbed.

THE FRONT LAWN - MONSTER WORLD TOUR

Elizabeth O'Connor talks to Don McGlashan and Harry Sinclair of the Front Lawn ....

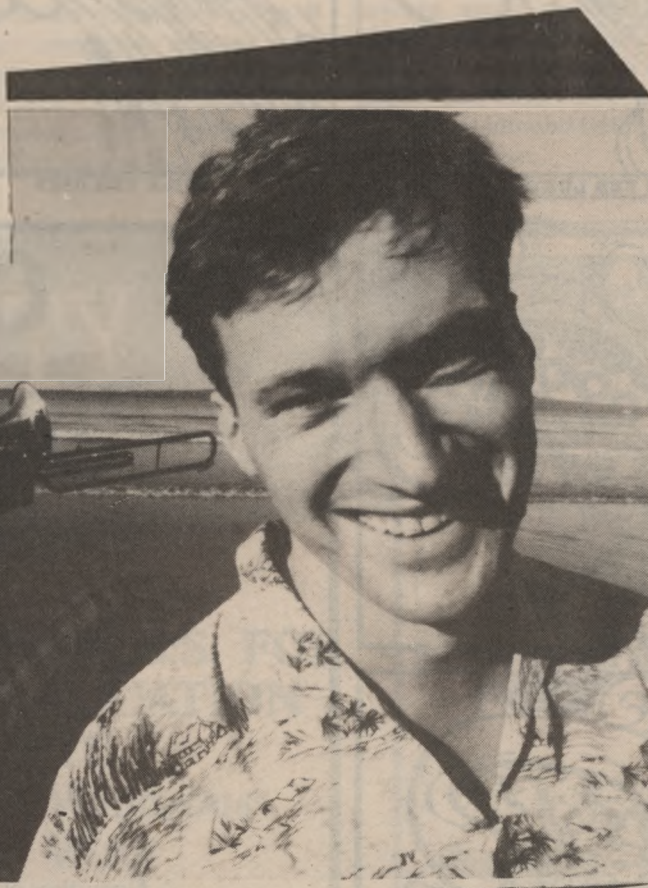

This monster has two heads - performers Don McGlashan and Harry Sinclair - it sings, plays, acts, dances and makes you laugh, and it's about to embark on a World Tour which will leave gigantic footprints all over Edinburgh, London, New York, and - you guessed it - Auckland, Christchurch and Dunedin.

The first step in this mammoth propagation of The Front Lawn (the Melbourne Times predicted they would soon overtake sheep as New Zealand's major export) is the Maidment Theatre, where they'll play a season from May 10 to 19.

The new show will be 'big, loud and musical' says Harry, with a number of new songs (some of which you'll hear on their forthcoming L.P.) An old favourite item will be included: The Reason for Breakfast.

The Front Lawn are used to following opportunity round the world. Harry studied drama in Paris, Don performed in New York, and since the two formed The Front Lawn in 1985 they have toured New Zealand and have made three visits to Australia.

The last was for the Melbourne Comedy Festival, 'a pretty crass, commercial sort of event where Melbourne, to its credit, celebrates the fact that it's the heart of stand-up comedy in Australia', says Don. Though The Front Lawn are not at all like traditional stand-up comics, their shows have gone down very well in Australia. Audiences appreciate the blend of comedy, seriousness and music

- Harry says 'a Front Lawn piece doesn't have to be funny to be good' - and the New Zealand style and content of the work.

Harry and Don don't try to change their work to fit a foreign audience - 'We have to do what we do best'. They steer clear of the easy laugh. They try to describe what they see in people around them, how they relate to each other, how they communicate.

They choose their material not by setting out to ask such questions as 'What does suburbia mean to most people?', but by throwing ideas, images, situations at each other like pancakes at a wall until some of them stick.

The working relationship between Harry and Don is immeasurably important in their success. Don says, 'The other person tends to act as a quality control. It makes you quite comfortable about saying a really stupid idea.' Ideas they'd be embarrassed to contemplate alone, because they seem too uninteresting or too stupid, are thrown around: sometimes the other person can see fascinating possibilities.

The Front Lawn put their adventuresome spirit down to the kind of inspiration around when they left school and started out as performers. If it hadn't been for Red Mole, Inside Information, The Plague, Limbs' early shows, the Topp Twins and a host of other influences, they might have become 'some much more rarified theatre group'.

They think, however, that the current performance scene in New Zealand is exciting. They've recently enjoyed Tantrum's The Wedding Party in Auckland, and The Threepenny Opera featuring the Six Volts in Wellington. Harry says he's seen nothing like these shows recently in Melbourne, where mainstream theatre is much more formal and British.

The Front Lawn haven't performed on the Auckland campus since Orientation in 1986. Students shouldn't miss the chance to see them this May. The Front Lawn has built up an excellent relationship with audiences; the pair are praised for the way they press familiar material into wildly original shapes, for their unpretentious good humour and their outstanding musical and technical skills. Their favourite audience is 'people who actually want to come and see us.' If you're one of these, book for the Maidment season through BASS, 375-000.

THE PARTY BOYS

May 10 - Windsor Park

May 13 - Esplanade

May 14 - Gluepot

May 15 - Forge Nightclub, Papakura

Australia's Party Boys have been around since 1982 in many different forms and have featured many big names in Australian music. More than just a band out for the odd live performance, they have released four successful live albums. At the moment they are working on releasing singles and videos as well as another album later on in the year. They already have two hit singles under their belts - 'He's Gonna Step On You Again' and 'Hold Your Head Up'. The next single soon to be released is 'Gloria', which was an original hit for Van Morrison and more recently Laura Branigan.

The current line-up includes bassist Paul Christie, one of the founding members, who has played in the Kevin Borich Express and Mondo Rock. Guitarist Kevin Borich, the other founding member, played with the La De Das in the late 60's and formed the Kevin Borich Express in the early 70's. Richard Harvey is best known for his drumming with the Divinyls for five years, but has also toured in the States with Joe Walsh. Alan Lancaster formed Status Quo in 1962 and was instrumental in writing and producing all their singles and albums which have sold in their millions over the years. John Brewster has recorded eight albums with the Angels, co-writing and producing most of the songs, and lead singer John Swan (who just happens to be the brother of Jimmy Barnes) has had many chart successes in his 16 singles and five albums.

All are very ambitious, together aiming to be the major musical force in Australia as well as getting attention overseas.

SIX VOLTS

The Playground - May 11
Auckland City Art Gallery - May 12
Limbs Studio - May 13 & 14

Wellington's Six Volts are a six member band, who, with a great array of unusual and interesting instruments, have developed a unique style of interpreting many styles of music - from comic opera to early jazz and 60's pop to country swing and cool bossa nova. Their repertoire includes some humorous and often twisted versions of notorious pop songs (such as the Star Trek theme), as well as many originals.

Originally called the Four Volts, they have added two new members to their lineup. They all draw from diverse musical backgrounds, one being a trained opera singer, others with a jazz or rock grounding, and some involved in experimental groups, together creating a unique style. Six Volts have recently released a highly acclaimed album, 'Something's Burning' on Braille records, and they have received high praise for their part in Downstage's festival production of the Threepenny Opera.

THE CHILLS & STRAITJACKET FITS

The Gluepot
April 23

I don't know, bass players these days - the guy from the 'fits' never seems to smile and Justin Harwood from the Chills has gone and shaved off all his hair. Anyway, this was an evening that promised great things and delivered them. First up, Straitjacket Fits, who by the sound of comments I heard, continued to convert the ignorant to their wonderful wall of sound. They seem to be working even better as a group, faster and louder than ever before. Highlights had to be a cover of Leonard Cohen's 'So Long Marianne', 'Dial a Prayer' and 'She Speeds'.

Then came the Chills who positively warmed the Gluepot, playing a long set of most of their material including most of the new album 'Brave Words'. The number and variety of songs show what an impressive collection they now have. Many of the old songs are now really rocking including a very energetic 'Kaleidoscope World' and a new song 'Watching all the Home Movies' which was announced as a dance song where everyone promptly danced, (well, fast gyrating jumping really), and continued to for the rest of the evening.

After two encores including 'This is the Way' on slide guitar and the effervescent 'Rolling Moon' I left content that New Zealand music was still something to be proud of and that whoever stood all over my shoes, was going to get it.

HAIR FORECAST

For winter, a real change in the look of hair. The difference... hair moves in a totally new direction... forward to frame the face in a variety of cuts with super styling options. Hair has less to do with fashion, more to do with individual style. The overall message? Whatever the choice of cut, colour or style, it should remain realistic.

by Cut Above's Gael Thompson

When young people contemplate a change of hairstyle, a different cut, colour, perm or style, they generally want something new. The mistake many students make is to change their style too drastically. The trap? Opting for the most radical cut rather than finding something that's part of the season, even funky, yet works specifically for you. While hairdressers may promote 'the look of the year', they're geared more importantly to helping you find the right cut for your hair texture, face shape and lifestyle. It's a question of finding a degree of change you can handle (and afford!)

LONG BOB:

Autumn's straight crop has grown sophisticated... gently graduated to swing forward in the new direction.

'BEATLES' CROP:

Sixties inspired windswept cut, root permed for hidden style support.

So look around you at those lucky people whose hair looks consistently good. They've learnt to observe the importance of small changes: redirecting a fringe, a little more layering, subtle highlights where hair direction shows them to advantage, partial perming for lift or control precisely where needed. And always, working with the possibilities of your hair, not against its limitations.

CAMPUS CUTS

Personality plus is the aim - cuts that are part of the new season's powerful fashion story - high performance for body, clothes and hair - cuts as strongly sculptured or loosely structured as you choose - the keynote is individuality. There's a fashion feel for hair that moves forward or towards the face, with multiple layers and

CITY SLICK:

Funky guy's style... permed and gelled to emphasize contrasts of textures and lengths.

lengths and textures... short and close to the head like a cap or long and swinging freely with body movement.

BODY BEAUTIFUL

The newest volume is a soft fullness, natural shape plus more body, a new, unsophisticated appeal. Messy curls and 'scrunching' are out. Good news also for limp straight hair, great value for short hair... 'roof' lift adding support only where needed without visible curl. Revived from the 1940's is the graduated spiral method for giving wave movement to long hair. Perming is as big as it was then... the difference is in ease of maintenance... simply wash it, comb it off your face with mousse and leave to dry.

NEW WAVE COLOUR

Colour now is used to emphasize movement and texture. The trick is speed and simplicity, new quick, and easy techniques like comb-on colours which are simply painted in to dramatize the cut, personalize YOUR style. Dramatic contrasts of tone and depth are fashion news, often combined with contrasts of texture, straight and curly for instant effect. Thick streaks of strong colour are also popular... hair is still full of colour even when 'gelled' into a wet look.

OUTDOORS MAN:

Rugged, masculine, no fuss look, cut on square, sculptural lines, permed for hidden control.

BULLSHIT!

POLITICS

Hello all,

It's got to that time of the year when mixing pleasure with work becomes an art.

Thanks to our predecessors we all have lots of term's work to do as well as the exam at the end of it. Students today must put more library and hard hours in just so they can sit the exam with a good chance of passing. This has the effect of keeping students off the streets (protesting) and therefore reducing their political effectiveness.

It also means they cannot afford the time to socialize quite as much. This has not been alleviated by the fact that some university departments deliberately have their terms tests during Capping week. I feel sorry for those of you who cannot experience a pub crawl; you'll be the furthestest thing from my mind on Wednesday. Maybe next year.

Well you've got some holidays to recover from these arduous activities - or perhaps to complete those essays you managed to squeeze an extension out of. Have fun anyway, got to go -

Cheers

TREZ SEZ

Welcome to another column in which I seek to keep you informed on where your student fees are spent. Please write in to Craccum if you have any questions.

The Typesetter:

In June 1987 we purchased a new typesetter for $46,198. The old typesetter was in need of repairs (c$5000), and some people believed that it was an appropriate time to purchase a new one. It was argued that AUSA would be able to do more outside contract work and gain income for your Student Association. A figure of $20,000 per year was suggested - the idea was that the new machine would pay for itself in 3 years.

The machine is of middle size - larger than Campus News or Craccum requires because it aims to do outside work. Due to administrative problems it ran at a loss of $2788 last year. Some people believe that it is a white elephant. Others believe it can still run at a substantial surplus. I fall in the latter category simply because we are stuck with it. The resale value would be low, because there is a small market for machines of this type.

I therefore believe the best action to take is to maximise income from the machine we have. This is the course I am pursuing. No student fees were spent on the machine - it was funded by special trusts that are used for capital purchases.

Because of the concern expressed over this item, and the Women's Enquiry, I intend to move the following policy motions at the Winter General Meeting which shall bind the Executive. If you are really concerned about your fees, you should turn up to discuss these motions which seek to give ordinary students more control.

That expenditure on projects which AUSA has never engaged in before in excess of $10,000 (adjusted for inflation) be approved by General Meeting or referendum, provided that failure to achieve a quorum for a General Meeting shall be treated as approval.

That expenditure on capital items in excess of $30,000 (adjusted for inflation) be approved by General Meeting or referendum, provided that failure to achieve a quorum for a General Meeting shall be treated as approval.

Please write in if you want to discuss this, or any other issue. I'm afraid I've run out of space for this column, so you'll have to wait until next week for more information on what's happening with your money. (If you can't wait, write to Craccum asking them to give me more space!)

SRC REPORT APRIL 27

This weeks meeting got underway with the SRC Chair elections. I got only one vote. Angus managed 86 votes and Fiona got 112 votes and SRC Chair. Graham then passed the chair to Ms Stevens, who had to pass it back to Graham because of calls for a division. This was turned down because Fiona had a good majority, and so the chair was passed back to Fiona.

Her first motion closed nominations for positions on the Teaching/Learning Advisory Committee and the Education Committee. Trish Shaw got onto the latter, and no-one was nominated for the former. Nominations are now, I believe, open for positions on the Teaching/Learning Advisory Committee and the Student Union Management Committee - see the new SRC Chair in her office (Rm 112a).

Once again, there was no big fuss with the affiliation of clubs. No one even asked any questions. Then the chair was passed back to Graham (why did he bother resigning?).

The first order of general business was that guests should have to give their name and address to and show ID before they can get into Shadows. Concern had been raised after a woman's attacker turned out to be a guest in Shadows. They've had a bit of trouble tracing him, and it was found that some people had given false numbers.

Wally pointed out that some non-students were well known to Shadows staff, and compulsory checking would delay people going in. Alan Parker (AVP) was worried that possible attackers could get women's addresses from the register, and he pointed out that if staff had a student's name then they could track down his/her guest anyway: students are responsible for their guests.

The motion was then amended to give the staff discretionary powers, and shortly afterwards the motion was carried, with Alan's dissent being recorded.

The next motion was for a referendum on the continued existence of Womenspace. Wally thought that there should be discussion on it as it was not highly used. Some one commented that there was not a lot of common room space around.

It was said that the women who used it weren't witches and wanted to escape from the male world. In a very entertaining speech, Paul McD Gourlie likened doing away with Womenspace to doing away with love and said that we guys should keep Womenspace so that we can go on thinking we're great without worrying about women taking over the world.

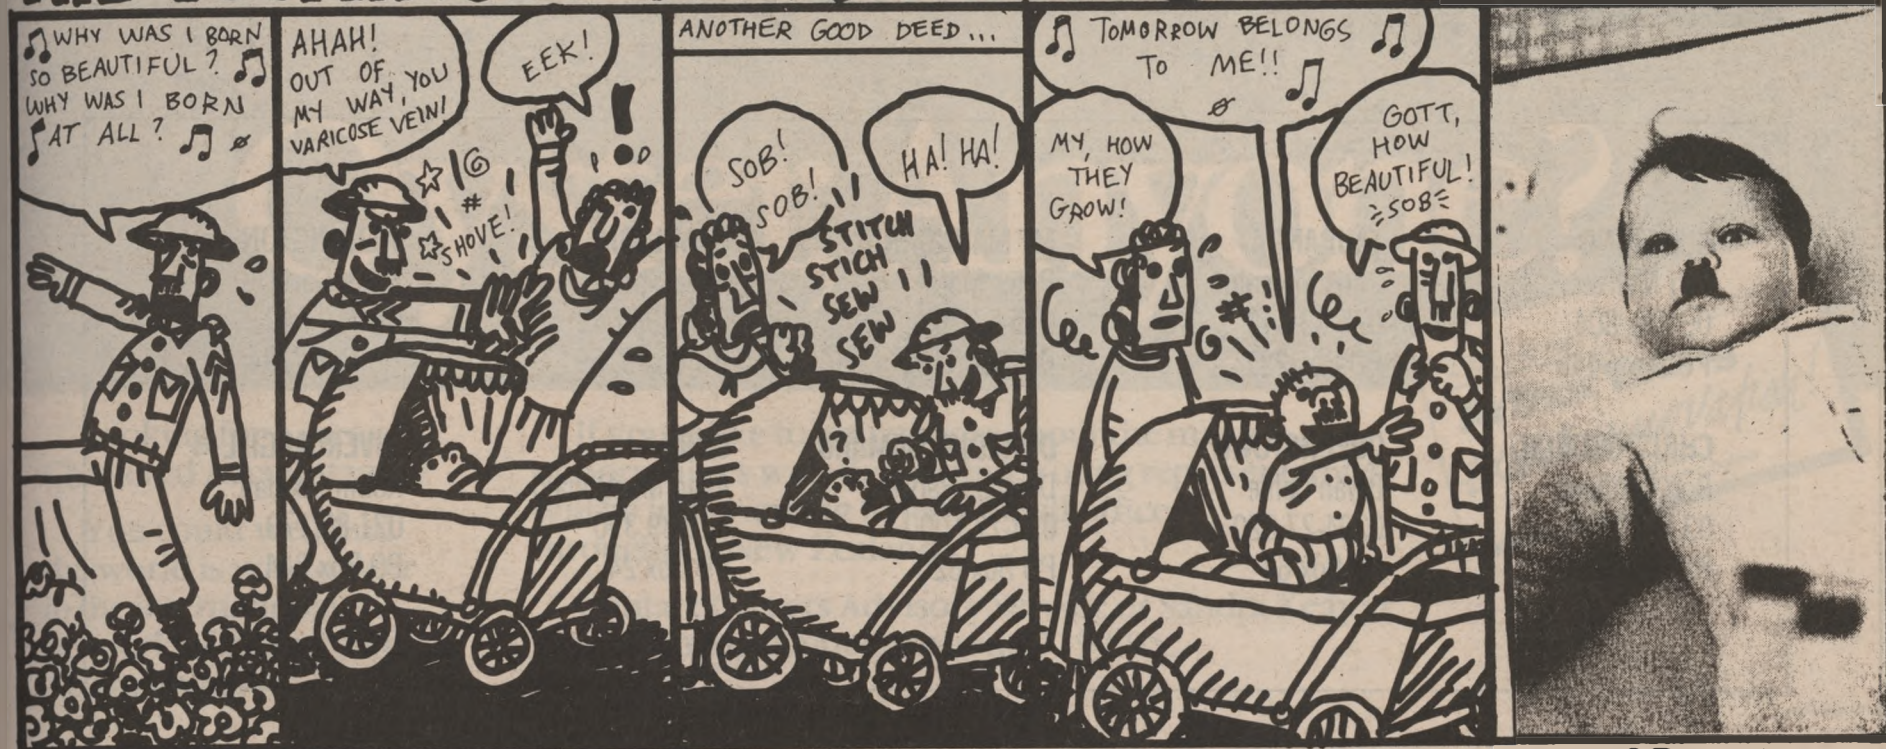

In his reply, Wally said that we should discuss it in a wider forum where 2,000 could vote instead of 150. The motion was lost.

The next motion (Hackshaw/Bush) was that a 'Wallyspace' (a small, dark room without a power point) be established and that Wally be required to stand in it from 12-4 on Wednesdays. Graham complained that Wally was always niggling about rules etc and Graham was sick of it, Wallyspace wouldn't take up much room and wouldn't use any power. Anyway, Graham hadn't had a good rave in a year. Wally didn't mind the personal attack, but was disappointed that there would be no discussion on Womenspace, and Wayne didn't really have anything that he could say. This promising motion was then found to be unconstitutional (all members of the AUSA, Wally included, have a right to attend SRC).

Finally awards: chocolate fish went to Graham, Beatle Treadwell (WRO) for being nice and never having had one and Paul Turner ('give me one for being secretary').

CAREERS ADVISORY SERVICE

CAREERS EXPO 1988

NOTICE TO ALL 1988 JOB SEEKERS

CAS has now put together the annual CAREERS EXPO programme. It runs throughout the second term from early June through to mid August and provides an opportunity for students to talk with prospective employers and gain specific job information. The CAS registration form is used as the basic Resume. This form should be neatly filled in, using black pen as it is photocopied and given to every interviewer with whom you have an appointment.

The current market puts a greater pressure on students to investigate job prospects in greater depth and over a wider spectrum. It is necessary to adopt a determined and persistent marketing campaign. It is pointless to be a passive applicant. You are the product and the University produces fine products - Market your potential completely !!!

Any application should begin with research. The first step is with yourself. Make decisions about what you want to do with the rest of your life. How well are you equipped for various employment areas? What do you enjoy doing? And equally important, what do you dislike doing? Make a list of your skills and identify career possibilities and alternatives. Consider the occupations where you can maximise your attributes and consider the organisations that offer such employment.

The next stage is to find out as much as possible about these employers. Look through Annual Reports, In-house Magazines, Financial Pages of the Newspapers, CAS files, and talking with people associated with the various organisations. With an increased awareness you will be better equipped to attend the interviews and participate in a full and positive manner. The staff at CAS can help - use the resources available to you.

PROCEDURE

1. Collect REGISTRATION FORM and APPOINTMENT SCHEDULE from CAS.
2. Fill in Registration Form - print (USING BLACK PEN) or type to give clear, precise presentation. Give careful attention to pages 3 and 4 - this resume should be as full as possible to give some indication of your interests - thus conveying a picture of your personality as well as your academic skills. Copies of this form will be given to each employer that you see.
NO APPOINTMENTS WILL BE MADE WITH VISITING EMPLOYERS WITHOUT THIS FORM BEING COMPLETED.
3. READ through the employer list carefully. Decide which employers interest you and list them on your appointment schedule, (using the space designated) a range of 10 employers maximum would be appropriate.
4. Call in to CAS to make appointments. Please bring your completed Registration form AND your lecture timetable.
Literature on most organisations is available at CAS.
Company Presentation - lunchtime talks and evening presentations are open to all interested students/graduates. However some organisations have stipulated that their presentation is A PRE-REQUISITE TO AN INTERVIEW - make a note of these.
If unable to keep any appointment PLEASE notify CAS as soon as possible. By failing to keep appointments you deprive other students of the opportunity of an interview.

DO NOT LEAVE IT TOO LATE TO COME AND MAKE APPOINTMENTS.

REMINDER

For those of you who would like to improve your interview technique: INTERVIEW SEMINAR - Friday 3 June at 1.00pm in the Upper Lecture Theatre

OPEN TO EVERYONE

If demand requires CAS will organise Interview Workshops with a more personal perspective.

GOOD LUCK - IF WE CAN HELP, DROP OVER TO CAS
WE WOULD BE HAPPY TO SEE YOU.

Formal training is continually being undertaken in auditing, accounting, small business advisory services, taxation, management consulting, and special areas, such as investigations, acquisitions and insolvency services. Technology is an integral part of today's business world, and Touche Ross encourages its people to gain experience and knowledge, particularly in the micro computer field.

If you have a desire to become a conservative, rigidly conventional accountant, then pursuing a career with Touche Ross is not for you... on the other hand, IF YOU DO WISH to become part of a progressive, innovative and dynamic business, then pick up the phone or write NOW and discuss your prospects with: Martyn Fisher, Staff Partner, Touche Ross & Co., CPO Box 3979, Auckland. ### GEOFFREY THE TUBE TRAIN AND THE FAT COMEDIAN

By Alexei Sayle and Oscar Zarate (Methven $19.95)

Versatile chappie this Alexei Sayle. When he hasn't been making bicycle ads, he's been making life hell for The Young Ones as the Balowski family, starring in films like Gorky Park and the forthcoming Siesta, conquering the charts with Ullo John! Got a New Motor and Didn't you kill my brother? and not winning the Booker Prize for Train to Hell. And, now with Geoffrey the Tube Train and the Fat Comedian, he has launched his first foray into the comics medium, accompanied by Argentine artist Oscar Zarate.

Geoffrey is a deceptively complex, ambitious piece of writing. On one hand, it is an affectionate but sardonic tribute to such endearing children's illustrated books like Thomas the Tank Engine (Sayle's prose is marvellously biting 'The Southern Line went from Quelch Park in the north, where all the kind white people with the new German cars lived... to Paxton in the south, where all the nice black people with the old British cars lived.') but on the other hand, it is a savagely autobiographical account of the fat comedian's frustrations over not being able to ply his trade because of a court injunction brought against him by his former managers. (Particularly side splitting is the torrent of abuse he unleashes against an unsuspecting board of advertising executives as he takes advantage of the common abuse law which states that while you may not call somebody a liar or a cheat in public, you can call them a wanker which results in the inevitable 'A comedian dying is a horrible thing. A comedian dying in a confined space is a doubly horrific thing.') The two story lines eventually converge in true Dennis Potter style as the comedian decides to write a children's book and ends up turning detective as a series of inexplicable, gruesome murders are committed upon the Southern Line. (Absolutely priceless is the scene where Sir Jimmy MacTaggart, 'a very important person,' is electrocuted while taking a piss on the live rail.) The comedian applies all his grey matter to discovering a connection between the bizarre murders and eventually the truth dawns upon him 'Suddenly, a flash, like in all the best detective fiction... The connection came to me... All of them had been complete wankers' which I'm sure is meant to bear great philosophical ramifications.

Geoffrey does not contain the non-stop, outrageous gags that you might expect from Sayle, instead its humour is more subtle and subversive, perhaps more reminiscent of Monty Python than The Young Ones. It is, in fact, a brutally funny satire of English society which Sayle sees as rapidly disappearing down the toilet under Thatcher and no facet of the British rat race from show business to advertising and London transport emerges unscathed. (A highlight has to be 'Widdicombe on Moped,' a 'Lost Horizon' style utopia where time stopped at 1964 'We've got no immigrants, we've got birching, public hangings, pubs close at ten. No pop music. Smashing, eh?')

And, I shouldn't forget Sayle's partner in crime, artist Oscar Zarate, who previously was known best for his comic book adaptations of Othello and Dr Faustus. Zarate's art blends especially well with Sayle's prose and he displays great versatility as he illustrates the colourful, hellish, multi-cultured pandemonium of London and the disturbing idyllicness of the storybook sequences with equal aplomb.

Geoffrey the Tube Train and the Fat Comedian is perhaps the most accomplished work Sayle has done in his erratic career and the assurance he displays with the comic book medium show him to be a natural. Anyway, I better go before I start prattling on about how it is really nice to see a comic book in such an attractive package from a respected publisher and how it proves that not all comics are for kids...

FUCK IT UP

What is an Anarchist? Good question. Allow me to simply point the finger for one of the better answers.

Fuck It Up is the pure stuff. It kisses the balls of society with a ball-pen hammer. It's unsuited. It's straight forward. It's power lies in its dedication to a goal - a better world. It has all the might and passion and dogma of a television evangelist. Only it operates in the Here and Now for the Here and Now, fullstop. Reading Brett Taylor's strips, I laugh. I laugh at how clear and obvious and blatant and uncontrived they are. And I laugh because I can't help agreeing with them at heart. Likewise the screed. This stuff is that hammer which hits the nail on the head. Write to Brett Taylor, c/o Fly In The Ointment, Box 112, Oakura, Taranaki. Send $3.00 for the most recent issue. Unless you're a yuppie, it'll lift your spirits, okay?

'A Slight Ache'

THEATRE

'THE FOUR SEASONS'

Auckland Youth Theatre
Grey's Avenue
May 2-14

Occam Theatre Company (reviewed in Craccum Issue 6) will be performing Arnold Wesker's play, 'The Four Seasons', whose theme is the vulnerability of love.

Adam and Beatrice decide to dedicate a year to each other in the country. The play reveals, through a delicate poetic tapestry, their thoughts and understanding of past relationships and their fears over the prospect of a new one; a play that shares many of our own experiences.

Helena Ross plays Beatrice, Edward Newborn plays Adam. Tony Forster directs.

If you miss it at Auckland Youth Theatre, you can still catch it at Lopdell House, Titirangi (May 18,19) or at the Uxbridge Leisure Centre, Howick, (May 20,21).

'MASS'

Auckland Town Hall
May 21 & 23

'Mass', Leonard Bernstein's most controversial work is having its Australasian premiere in a large production of musical theatre combining rock, classical music, blues and opera. 250 performers are involved, and a further 45 in the production team. The Town Hall is to be transformed into a Gothic cathedral, designer Clyde Scott promising 'one of the most dramatic transformations ever attempted in the Town Hall.'

'Mass' features the Auckland Philharmonic Orchestra, dancers, a blues/jazz group, rock and blues singers, quadraphonic tapes and two massed choirs. It tells the story of a young priest struggling with his faith, and was originally commissioned by Jackie Kennedy for the opening of the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington.

Music School graduate, tenor Ross Hinton is principal soloist in Mass.

A SLIGHT ACHE

Auckland Youth Theatre
May 16-21, 7.30pm

Another Howard Pinter play, A Slight Ache is a black comedy or 'comedy of menace' revolving around Edward and Flora - a middle-class couple who live an ordered if unhappy cosiness. Their precarious relationship is threatened by an intruding wasp and a stationary, mysterious matchseller.

The silent matchseller is the catalyst of the events which follow setting off the interplay between husband and wife. The matchseller represents unknown forces - the awakening of youth, beauty and hope in Flora and the threat of decay for Edward. A Slight Ache is often funny, always intriguing with a satisfying twist at the end.

A Slight Ache will be preceded by two very funny Pinter revue sketches, Trouble in the Works and Applicant.

The three plays feature Glenn Walker, Linda Cotter and Tim Bray, and is presented by The Auckland Youth Theatre's Actors Theatre Ensemble.

SPYCATCHER

Last year I reviewed 'Spycatcher' for Craccum without having read the book, so I thought that justice would be served by taking a second look through eyes that have now had the benefit of seeing most - if not all - of Peter Wright's pages.

They are a good read, especially if the topic of espionage fascinates you, as it does me. Anything one says now is bound to be old hat - a symbol that Wright lends himself to in all the photos, looking a bit like a Mexican bandit with his wide sombrero. Perhaps the hat has become a symbol for his fight against the British establishment, personified by Mrs Thatcher whom he has called 'a bitch' with some acrimony when his royalties were being held up because of all the legal actions, initiated by the Attorney-General here and elsewhere. Our own Court of Appeal finally decided we Kiwis could read the book some four shopping days before Christmas, almost 5 months after the Dominion published its first extract and was banned. The main reason we were allowed this doubtful privilege was because of the extent to which Spycatcher had already been published around the world, 'achieving a unique position of notoriety', in the words of the Court of Appeal's President, Sir Robin Cooke. Reading Spycatcher when it's legit is rather like smoking a joint when the day comes that marijuana is decriminalised - it takes the thrill of being caught away.

What then is in the book for us NZ'ers. Well, first up, our own fledgling SIS was hatched out under the eagle eye of Sir Roger Hollis who Peter Wright says was the fifth man in MI5, coming at the end of the long line of defectors paraded in his book - McLean, Burgess, Philby and Blunt - being the Cambridge chorus line. Hollis may have been codenamed 'Ellis' by the Russians, according to Wright, and as there's no 'H' in Russian this sounds a bit too close for cryptanalysts' comfort. If Hollis was a Russian mole, then our own SIS was infiltrated almost from the moment of its birth. Brigadier Gilbert - its first director - went to London in 1957 and lived in with MI5 at its main HQ in Beaconsfield House. The tricks of the cloak and dagger trade were passed onto him by the dab old hands of Hollis/Ellis. It will be remembered that the Brigadier later infiltrated our own uni with a spy/student who got booted out when his cover was blown. But the Brigadier expressed no apology and felt we were an anarchistic bunch who badly needed to be surveilled.

From these dubious beginnings the SIS grew to its present prominence. You will no doubt recall that in 1985 there were 13 French spies within these fair shores of Aotearoa. They may have covered their tracks with mince and the odd frogman's suit, but not a murmur about their presence was passed on by the SIS anti-terrorist centre to the police, though they had briefings about the French presence back in May 1985 from British Intelligence (see Phillip Knightley's excellent book - 'the Second Oldest Profession' at p382).

Wright's long standing membership of the second oldest profession probably converted him into a full-time paranoiac with reds under every bed he sat upon (or slept in) - thus the mole hunts that have characterised the last 2 decades within the British Intelligence service. They were in the best traditions of the Stalinist purges of the 30's, even if not quite so many heads rolled. Even in the 1960's there was quite a backlash. I lived in London then and worked for a firm of solicitors who acted for quite a few members of the establishment. Profumo was caught out lying to the House of Commons in 1963 and we had to draft the statement that led to his demise. His other crime was to share a prostitute - Christine Keeler - with a Russian spy called Ivanov. Also in 1963 our firm acted for a man called Martelli - an atomic scientist who was the first man to get off a charge under the Official Secrets Act up to that time. As an articulated clerk, he had to organise the buying of sandals in Italy which had hollowed out heels. The prosecution had suggested this was standard equipment for a spy to wear to conceal microfilm in. The defence showed that anyone could walk into a shoe shop in Milano or any other Italian city and buy some. The case collapsed and I even think we got costs which is an unusual step. So it was interesting to read Peter Wright's account of this same case from a rather different angle, since he believed our client was as guilty as hell. The trial was in July '63, just before the Profumo scandal made world headlines.

Wright's trouble was the fact that he was a kind of inverted snob who enjoyed hob-nobbing with the establishment and holding secret meetings at the various clubs around London to which members of the Service all belonged. Indeed, the service itself had a club-like atmosphere which didn't even allow for a long time that its members should be positively vetted - a step that Wright first himself instituted with the purges of the 60's. At about the same time I worked in GCHQ at Cheltenham, being a Russian linguist caught up by National Service which still existed in England in those distant days and so was at one of the nerve centres of MI6. I was not impressed by what I saw. Security was very lax and soon after I left the service, the George Blake and Portland Spy ring cases showed up the penetration by the Russians of our own Intelligence network. Wright perhaps was not wrong in trying to change this club-like mentality but he had an uphill battle. In the end he declared: 'After years of being the hunter I felt myself to be the hunted'. He became infected with the paranoia of others, like the Russian defector Golitsin whom he personally took under his wing and whose theories on disinformation he espoused. Golitsin was even allowed to study the files of the JSSL (Joint Service School for Linguists) where I had been taught Russian and how to spy on them. So maybe my personal details have ended up in the KGB files anyway.

The world of espionage is a sad rather seedy one on the whole. Wright and I have one common origin - both coming from the county of Essex, but there the resemblance ends. 'Peter, you're too emotional', he was once told by Hollis. It was his gifts as an electronic whizz-kid that first got him into the Service. Recruited from Marconis in Great Baddow, he was instrumental in setting up the bugging equipment in Lancaster House that eavesdropped on successive Commonwealth conferences in which NZ participated and no doubt spoke, when the dissolution of the Empire was the main topic on the agenda. The same skills led to the entrapment of the Portland Spy ring and in particular a couple calling themselves Helen and Peter Kroger whose cover was as antiquarian booksellers from New Zealand. The one interesting fact to emerge about them from the trial is that they spoke with good old kiwi accents. The Krogers turned out to be American communists recruited by the KGB but Michael Parker in his book on the SIS suggests that they had been living in NZ some time before the ring was set up in London. The SIS may even have a file on them - who knows???

Wright's problem in the end was that he knew too many secrets and he was also short of money. He sold some of them at first to Chapman Pincher who published the Hollis mole theory in 'Their Trade is Treachery'. But the man who held the secrets too close to his chest no longer had broken a golden rule that offended against the secret code of his club. He had betrayed secrets and his treachery was not going to pass without censure. Thus the long legal battles and the relentless opposition of the iron lady. Because Wright had been recruited from outside the Service, he never got his full pension. He went to live in Tasmania beyond the range of the Official Secrets Act, but the British law has a long arm - it stretches even to this farflung outpost. He has started a trend - many more memoirs of Spycatchers will no doubt follow - but none as infamous as his. Try to get them from the library - it's a lot cheaper.

ART

Death & Desire - Edvard Munch
Auckland City Art Gallery
29 April - 5 June
10.00am - 4.30pm
$4 Adult, $2 Student

Edvard Munch's 'Death and Desire', a collection of one hundred prints by the famous Norwegian expressionist, has just opened at the Auckland City Art Gallery. This is by far the most important exhibition of 1988, so even if you don't see anything else at the art gallery all year, don't miss 'Death and Desire'.

A very impressive catalogue will be available during the exhibition which includes colour plates of many of the prints, a biography of the artist and an explanation of his work and method. There is a generous student concession so there's no excuse for missing this chance to see one of the great painters and printmakers of the last century.

HARD TICKET TO HAWAII

If someone put a rubber stocking on their arm, carefully painted it, stuck eyes on it, with a hand-puppet type mouth, do you think it would look like a fearsome snake? No, neither do I but the Sidaris family seem to think it's a great idea - more about that later.

HARD TICKET TO HAWAII is probably the worst thing RCA have EVER released - they've gone beyond mere barrel scraping and moved into the realms of corpse reviving. The opening credits are astounding - pieces of paper stuck on the boxes (and fork truck!) that the 'actors' are moving around, one of which contains the aforementioned arm-snake with a sign saying 'Warning - Toxic Snake!'

The principle characters are two female couriers whose uniform consists of mini-skirt, copious quantities of blondish hair and white cowboy boots! They unwittingly intercept a smuggled diamond shipment (on a model helicopter) and when attacked produce kung fu stars from their cowboy boots (and notice they pull them out of their still living victims!) After flying home one says 'After a day like this it's good to be home' - when the villains return empty handed to their boss he calls them 'dummies'.

Suffice to say the rest of the story involves 2 secret agents, a skateboarder and plastic mannequin who gets killed by a bazooka, an evil arch villain (hopelessly overacting), some totally irrelevant football interview scenes and an extended shoot out. Often descending into tackiness the 2 females are constantly taking their clothes off for no apparent reason. Anyway the climax of the film is where one of the women is attacked by a bad guy - she stabs him, hits him, shoots him with a speargun etc. Then while barricaded in the bathroom the arm-snake explodes up through the toilet but it's OK cos one of the male dudes crashes through the wall on a motorbike and blows its head off with a 4 barrelled bazooka.

This film was written and directed, and co-ordinated by Andy, Arlene and Christian Sidaris respectively - obviously providing evidence of some sort of genetic brain defect, unless its a bold attempt at creating a new wave of artistic cinema - but I doubt it. Take heed of the blurb on the slick 'To get to paradise they'll have to go through hell' except don't expect too much paradise. Watching this film with others means you'll be constantly turning to stare at each other in wide eyed disbelief.

If you can put up with the sleaze this film is mindbogglingly hilarious (the censor has cut out the gory frisbee scene - a good move). 'Where the hell did that snake come from!?' 'Would you believe, up the toilet!?' Dramatic pause. 'Just when you thought it was safe to take a pee!?' YEECH!!!

NEW DIRECTIONS IN FIBRE

This exhibition of contemporary New Zealand and Australian fibre art features work by eight artists showing the innovation, diversity and progressive development in fibre arts today. Guest exhibitor is Australian Inga Hunter who will be exhibiting six works as well as giving workshops and a talk at the gallery on May 16 at 7.30pm.

Quilt maker Malcolm Harrison, and surface designer Carole Davis are preparing large works for installation. Jenny Hunt is making bound coloured assemblages, and Kate Wells will be displaying a series of woven tapestries. Adrienne Rewi is producing a moulded and cast paper sculpture and Suzy Pennington a wall piece. Maureen Lander is creating a large suspended rain cloak in the Sculpture Court.

FINGERS JEWELLERY PETER WOODS: FORGED METALS

2 Kitchener St, City
May 2 - 28

Silversmith Peter Woods has worked as a silversmith in Nelson and Auckland since 1977, and is currently working in his Newmarket studio. The works on exhibition are of three types - armbands, drinking and serving vessels. He has used the ancient work practice of hammer and anvil to return to the basics of design where idea, material and process interact equally.

The Fingers theme show for this year is '$100 Under' - where contributing jewellers have been asked to make work that will sell for less than $100 and make these works more financially accessible to the public.

JORG IMMENDORFF - 'READYMADE DE L'HISTOIRE'

Auckland City Art Gallery
April 28 - June 5

The result of a commission from the Auckland City Art Gallery, this painting has taken leading German artist Jorg Immendorff two months to complete and is now to be exhibited at the gallery.

As well as the finished painting, the 92 working paintings and sketches will also be displayed, giving an idea of the planning and work involved in the process of such a large complex painting.

Completed back in January, this will be the first time this has been displayed. The accompanying paintings and sketches will be returned to the artist in Germany once the exhibition closes but the painting will remain part of the Gallery's permanent exhibition.

'Ready-made de l'Histoire' is a large composition, measuring 1.5 by 1.75 metres. It is full of references to German history and art history. Organiser of the project, Andrew Bogle, describes Immendorff's art as 'expressing the political and social realities that since the second world war have moulded the modern German ethos. His inimitable bravura brushwork, pictorial inventiveness and figurative style of painting make Immendorff's pictures a visual smorgasbord.'

The painting represents a celebrated haunt of past artists, writers and intellectuals seated in the Parisian Cafe Flor, in front of a greatly detailed historical backdrop. Included in the painting is the doyen of the avant-garde movement, Marcel Duchamp, to whose work this painting makes direct reference. Alongside are celebrated expressionist artists Otto Dix, Ernst Ludwig Kirchner and Max Beckmann. These artists, along with other leading avant-garde artists of the 1930's suffered public ridicule and ostracism by Hitler's Germany, but together fought for the survival of German art. Joseph Beuys, Immendorff's late friend and teacher from the Dusseldorf Art Academy and Immendorff himself are included in the scene.

IRRITATED

Dear Kathie Stewart,
Your letter in answer to Graham Blaikie & the like was a delight. Although I intellectually accept that males have a right to express their opinion on such topics as Abortion and Rape, I am often irritated (to put it mildly) by their seemingly total disregard of the females emotions and needs. I chose not to answer Graham's letter because of my own emotional reaction to it. Roaring on paper is somewhat illegible. Kathie your letter echoed my feelings while at the same time showing rational argument and human compassion.

To conclude I am reminded of Robin Williams comment on the myth that men share the birthing process. 'If you're passing a bowling ball, and/or opening an umbrella up your arse, and/or cutting your foreskin off with a chainsaw...' then you'll have some idea of what it is to give birth.

To all the 'Grahams' and 'Kathies':
Good luck and love on your journey through life.

Signed
'Mother of Three'

CAT AGREES

Dear Craccum,
The Student's Dilemma? How to respond. Nicola Patchett (Craccum, April 19) has strong personal views on animal experimentation, and I applaud her efforts in airing such views. These are issues which should be addressed. However, not all medical students hold her views. There is a wide range of opinion within the student body. For example, many people signing her petition specified agreement with certain clauses only, especially clauses 2 & 3 (not mentioned in her article) which did not condemn animal research per se. These clauses suggested technical modifications to specific experiments. Others didn't agree with the petition at all. The fact that only 40% of the class signed suggests that more than half the class did not agree with the views she put forward. It is for these people I hope to speak.

Nicky's objection to the 'dog lab' stems either from a belief that it is a source of suffering, or that the animal is put down unnecessarily. Does the animal suffer? Catheterisation is a common technique in hospitals. It is carried out on patients anaesthetised in much the same way as the dogs were. If the technique caused suffering, it would not be carried out. Maybe she objects to the dog being put down by injection afterwards. But if so, surely she would save more lives by turning her protests against the S.P.C.A.? What people imagine and react to when they hear of 'animal research' and the reality it entails are often vastly different.

In answer to the question 'why such secrecy?' I feel that the recent firebombing at Greenlane Hospital has shown the inherent dangers of being too 'up front'. The 'nutters' are not the concerned members of the public, who have every right to know what goes on and why, but radicals who would use 'animal welfare' as a means to other ends. Anarchy pour is NZ and all that.

Consistency is a feature of any strong moral stance. Much of what we know in modern physiology is based on the results of animal experimentation. Therefore to criticise as cruel and unnecessary all animal experimentation, and then to spend a large amount of time learning facts derived from it could be deemed hypocritical. Obviously, a line is drawn between carrying out experiments and 'compromising our moral values', and using the results of such experimentation and escaping with morals intact. A fine line indeed. The dilemma facing us goes beyond 'learn physiology or fail'. The crux of the matter is 'learn physiology or inflict, through ignorance, unnecessary suffering upon your patients'. It may be cliché, but the understanding research has given us really has greatly reduced human (and, through vet science, animal) suffering.

I hope you will consider publication of this letter to show that the animal ethics issue is not simply a 'staff vs. students' problem, but is a major dilemma of interest to all involved in medicine. I have considered at length the questions raised and remain convinced that essential research with a minimum of suffering is a worthy goal. My cat agrees.

Yours sincerely,
Chris Hammett BHB III

Dearest Darlink Patrike, Mon Chocolate Covered Cherry,
'Ow the 'ours are dragging since last I saw your 'belle petit bott' (allow moi a few words of Francois, mon poppet) bent gracefully over mon latrine in the early morning light. You are magnificent in ze bathroom as well, it is true, but your aim is lousy, mon chérie, and ze housekeeper was a tad pissed off.

Even now, I am painting in anticipation of le 'grande passion' I 'ave arranged for tonight. I 'ave 'ad le chinning bars polished and the bear-skin rug drycleaned. Giddyay Craccum,

WAYMBAT

Dear Craccum,

Wayne McDougall is a GENIUS! Self-abuse, the potential market is enormous. It would have to take such a well trained mind to even start calculating the merest operational parameters of such a plan.

I refer, of course, to the S.R.C. meeting of April 20. Brilliant, absolutely brilliant! Imagine comparing oneself to a Wombat, and in public too! Incredible! The similarities are amazing! I tip my hat to you Waymbat, I mean Wayne, you really have excelled yourself this time.

Mon Petite-mon Cherie

Whenever visions of your sweaty little body flash through my mind, ze urge to visit your little bathroom overwhelms my delicate sensibilities. Your evocative description of moi personal toilette raises dreams of dirty bidets and sweat stained bearskins, fannes the flames of passion within my fevered imagination.

Your titilating request for the use of talcum powder as a sensual aid to our romantic grapplings brings nothing but enthusiastic approval. Owever, my darlink, your polishing the chinning bars is an error of judgement - you would not like me to slip 'in flagrante delecto'. It could cause severe pain in a sensitive part of our mutually appreciated anatomies.

Good news, Mon Cherie, I 'ave located the leather and lace accessories you were so keen to see. They will contrast nicely with the brown and yellow decor of our little lovenest and look scrumptious against the blackheads and pockmarks of your gorgeous flesh. As soon as I 'ave saved enough to visit you again my little flower, we shall again make beautiful music together.

I remain, forever, yours (when I can afford it)

P.S. The test results came back from la clinic today, we shall discuss them at our earliest opportunity.

ENGINEERING MYTH

Dear Craccum,

In reply to 'The Sloth': Fuck off!

You Engineers are so proud of your big drinking debauchery, but everyone knows it is in fact only a small minority of the Engineering Faculty who consume any sort of alcoholic beverage at all. The rest of you stand behind any 2- or 3-toed creature you can squeeze out from beneath a rock, push him out into the Quad, and shout:

'Look, look, this is a typical Engineering student.' Fuck off!

You're not fooling anyone! 75% of the bastards who actually turn up to your piss-drinking 'parties' are disguised Law students. Fuck off!

As for your $42,000 spend it on a much-needed facial operation to close that shit-spewing hole.

Hah, drinking Engineering students are a myth.

Yours,
Justin Hatch

P.S. Nah, nah, na, nah, nah.

PATHETIC RUBBISH

Dear Craccum,

I have read your pathetic piece of rubbish over the weeks and I have finally felt the need to write. What pisses me off are these self-righteous, puritan, hypocritical, boorish, moralising, piteous letters sent in by self-righteous, puritan, etc etc wankers. Where are all the interesting people? The last thing I want to read when I pick this up is a whining, moaning, self-indulgent letter whining on about abortion etc - look 'Kathie Stewart' and 'Graham Blaikie', my policy is much easier - kill the women for allowing themselves to get raped, and the rapist and their immediate families, and anyone they've come into contact with during their lives! And if anyone wants an abortion, I propose we rip the fuckers out with a vacuum cleaner! (Censor the last line if you find it too offensive, though I'll be thoroughly pissed off if you do).

And to 'Mike L.' - what is wrong with Northern Ireland? - I can't see anything wrong with a bunch of religious fanatical Paddy's running around killing each other, and the only thing wrong with Ethiopia is that they're not dying fast enough! But this is what I mean, this 'Mike L.' is professing on about how terrible the world is, only because he thinks it relieves his conscience by doing so, when really he is just evading the fact of how totally meaningless his pointless shitty life is. I mean, do we really have to read this?

I'm only really writing this to stir up a bit of controversy to liven things up around here. If I get a lot of comment, I'll keep writing. If not, I'll see what a truly apathetic shit-hole this place really is and keep writing anyway.

Thoroughly quite peeved off,
S. Moore

2. If you want to write in abusing this turkey, feel free to do so, however, your replies may be edited so that only the best bits are printed, and any further replies by the turkey are unlikely to be given the space either.

WHO'S A MINORITY?

Dear Craccum,

Over the past few months I have come to the realization that I am amongst the smallest minority in NZ.

I am not a Maori, a Polynesian, an Indian or an Asian. I am not a fucken homosexual, a lesbian, or a feminist radical, nor am I a rapist. I am not an overseas student or a palestinian. I am not a cripple or intellectually handicapped, a sickness beneficiary or even a pensioner. I am not on the dole or a domestic purposes benefit. I am in fact a 'Normal Kiwi bloke.'

Because I and a few others like me are such an oppressed minority, we are demanding a grant from both the Student Union and from the Government. This will hopefully start to compensate for all the bad things that the rest of you thrust upon our culture. The money will also see us through this lean financial period, or at least buy some kegs until we can bludge some more money.

We would also like a Nationwide survey to be conducted on the constant harassment and prejudice we are subject to. Because we are placed under such a burden by society, we would also like to be given our degrees instead of having to study for them. Automatic entry into real cruisy jobs with ummy secretaries and lots of money would also go down really well.

THE SLOTH

P.S. Could the genetic Mutant, alias bloody Wayne penis breath Mac syphilis infested Dougal please tell us where his figure of an $8,000 grant to the Engineering Society came from. Being on their executive, I know we only received a grant of $3225. Was there a typing error or are you simply spanking your onions.

Also Wayne, in that secret meeting you conducted with a few Engineers two weeks ago, you had great visions of completely restructuring AUSA, provided the Engineers backed you. Are you still going to come sucking up to us for support?

ABORTION

Dear Craccum,

A few years ago I took part in a debate on the topic of Abortion. My team and I put forward all the points Lois Easton mentioned in her letter. We won and I felt proud and justified until afterwards a fellow student approached me and told me she did not agree with our argument.

She was adopted as a baby and reasoned that had abortion been freely available she probably would not have lived. Needless to say my attitude changed and was reinforced some years later when my young son asked about abortion and, when told, said, as only children can, 'I'm glad you didn't abort me'.

Very few people wish they hadn't been born. Is nine months of your life too much to give to allow another human being to live?

Jacqui Jowles

IMPERFECT BEDFELLOWS

Dear Mike L. and Kathie S.,

Mike: If perfection was the prerequisite for forming an opinion, there'd be no opinions allowed in the world - certainly none peppered with as much invective as yours. I guess the guards at Treblinka must have had similar sentiments: 'I am not perfect. Who am I to say what is right and wrong?'

Kathie: Thank you for reminding me of my name 8x in one letter and defining by this, and your disparaging slur on males, exactly what you mean when you use the word 'condescending.' Still, the facts remain.

Fact No. 1: Neither of us has total knowledge. While I can't prove 100% that the developing baby is human, you can't prove 100% that abortion is not murder of another human being. Taking a life under such conditions is not a gamble either of us is qualified to take.

Fact No. 2: In a study of 'mothers' 5-10 years after their children were aborted 81% reported preoccupation with the aborted child; 73% reported flashbacks of the abortion experience; 54% experienced nightmares; 35% had perceived visitations from the aborted child.

Abortion is compassionate? For whom? Certainly not the mother. Certainly not the aborted child. And definitely not for the poor sod who believes in reincarnation in the U.S. where 1.5 million death sentences are signed annually.

MEET YOUR NEW

STUDENT PARENT RESOURCE OFFICER

Teenaa koutou e ngaa maatua tauria o teenei whare waananga, Ka mihi au i a koutou katoa, haere mai naumai. Kia ora mo taatou. Teenaa koutou, teenaa koutou, teenaa koutou katoa. Hi! My name is Ella Henry and I am your new Student Parent Resource Officer. (What? You didn't know you had one?) Part of my job is to be available to all student parents on campus, with regard to your studies or any personal problems, ie child care/health/budgeting, hassles with Government departments (Social Welfare, Family Benefit etc). I also act as liaison between you and AUSA or the University, and disseminate information that may be of interest or use to you.

For instance, are you all aware that there are two creches, situated behind the Commerce Department at 30 and 32 Wynyard St, which provide excellent care and are a good meeting place for student parents? It's the place where we commiserate about such earth shattering events as our children's development, the problems of inadequate parking, the rigours of combining parenting and study, and our latest test marks. This support network is invaluable in this large, seemingly impersonal institution. If you haven't yet, why not come down and see the place and meet the staff?

The creches often need someone to relieve at short notice when staff are ill - those with child care qualifications are preferred. Also, regular part time staff (mornings or afternoons) are needed.

Qualifications such as primary or kindergarten teacher, Childcare Certificate or Playcentre Supervisor are required for these positions. For more information contact Elaine McCulloch at the creche or by phoning 737-755.

Those already using the creche will be pleased to know that now that routines have settled there are study hours available for children over two. As usual, the places available for under-tuos are very limited. Enquire at the office. It's only by keeping creche usage up that we can hope to keep creche fees at a tolerable level.

VARSIITY ON WHEELS

A STUDENT PARENT TELLS ALL...

So you thought that those ramps and things that are all around the place (but principally alongside steps and stairs), were for paraplegics. You're wrong. They're for people on wheels. That includes yobbos on bicycles, librarians with their trolly loads, and people like me, with that wonderful machination which makes varsity for mother possible - the baby buggy.

What better way for a kid to start life than lectures from the age of three months. He probably takes in as much as the rest of us, but I do foresee problems with the mechanical interpretation of the use of a pen at exam time.

Life with wheels gives you a new perspective from which to survey the more straightforward routines of university life. You develop the nonchalance of the rich and the famous who are perpetually late, when the two minutes you have to cover the distance between you and your next lecture has to stretch to cover the seven minute route via creche in Wynyard St. And if you should strike an unexpected nappy change, face the music, you're going to be late. So you assume a little glamour to cover for the white sticky blobs on the left shoulder, and various yellow ones (which you only find, hours after the event), variouslyscattered about your person, and you saunter on into lectures with Clint Eastwood at your right shoulder.

Once you have thus attained membership of the ranks of the rich and famous, varsity isn't such a terrible hurdle, thanks to the saints at the creche. You've heard of St. Francis lover of animals, St Benedict, and others? Well compound them all to a fine liquor and you might come up with someone who is prepared to look after children en masse. These ladies can somehow cope with other peoples' children all day and still look as though they're enjoying it. They're heroes.

Study is generally done at night once junior is in bed. This in itself requires a fair degree of organisation but it can be done. The good old teenage varsity days of the struggle between the telly and the study are a distant memory. Once you've gone to all that trouble to create yourself some time for study, you devour it with a pleasure you could never before have imagined.

And when you've thrashed those lecture notes into shape, as you mount the stairs to bed (that haven of softness and sleep), you stop at his bedroom (just to check he's still breathing!) and life's looking great!

ISRAEL : S. AFRICA

Dear Craccum,

I agree with Stevens and Shindal, it is unhelpful to draw parallels between Israel and South Africa under the apartheid rubric. But it is quite inaccurate to deny, as they do, that there are historical and military links. These links are well-known and publicised in both countries, but little remarked on in other Western countries where these matters are politically embarrassing.

South Africa was the first country to accord Israel de facto recognition in 1948 when its government in fact sent food, medical and other supplies to the nascent state. The first Nationalist Government accorded de jure recognition and its Prime Minister Malan was the first western head of government to visit Israel in 1953. At the time of the Anglo-French-Israeli attack on Egypt in 1956, South Africa permitted army reserve officers to serve in the Israeli army and lifted exchange control regulations to allow South African Jews to transfer funds to Israel.

In 1967 the Vorster government again relaxed currency controls to enable the transfer of funds - to the tune of $US20.5m in the first week of the war. At this time Die Burger, recognised voice of the South African government, editorialised that Israel and South Africa, being both engaged in a struggle for existence, had much in common which should be utilised rather than denied. In pursuance of this, an Israeli-South Africa Trade Association was established at the so-called 'millionaires' conference' in Jerusalem 1968. In 1973 the leader of the SA delegation to the ISATA conference announced a scheme to use their economic collaboration to evade trade sanctions against SA by African states. Three years later, Prime Minister Vorster visited Israel to conclude an agreement on economic, scientific and industrial co-operation which included the setting up of a Joint Ministerial Committee. The agreement made special provision to allow South Africans to invest up to $US60m in Israel. At the time South Africans were not even allowed to invest in the US or UK. Semi-finished products are imported from SA, finished and re-exported from Israel, as a means of avoiding embargoes on SA products and to increase SA penetration of EEC markets.

Military intelligence co-operation between SA and Israel is of similar long-standing and has been of vital importance to the apartheid state. Israel has built for SA long-range fast warships equipped with Gabriel sea-to-sea missiles and Kaffir jet planes together with the supply of advanced electronic equipment. Between 1976 and 1987 Israel was a substantial supplier of and conduit for the transfer of naval, armoured, electronic and counter-insurgency equipment. All of which is fully-documented. Reports, including claims made in the Knesset, indicate that Israeli army personnel have been attached to the SADF as instructors and observers and that the facility is reciprocal.

None of this has anything to do with the often virulent anti-semitism of many Afrikaner leaders. Nor should it detract from the heroic opposition to the apartheid state by the many members of South African Jewry who have suffered solitary confinement, torture, death and exile at the hands of that state. Denying the alliance and the strategic imperatives and western interests which underpin it is, however, just plain sloppy and does nothing to advance the cause of conflict resolution in either the Middle East or Southern Africa.

FAIR GO FOR WAYNE

Dear Craccum,

I am writing to express my annoyance with which the student body has generally treated Wayne MacDougall.

For years now, AUSA has had varying problems with the various Accountants (ED. I think he actually means Treasurers), and now, when we finally get one that does the job efficiently, he is constantly scorned and insulted for doing his job properly.

O.K., so the buy's a bit of a melter, but what really fucks me off is the way in which it's become terribly fashionable to be Anti-McDougall. What's worse is that this 'movement' seems to be led by the University Pratt-Pack-namely: Angus I'm -cool-everybody-because-I'm-in-NORML Ogilvie, and Paul I'm-also-cool-people-cos-I-know-Angus Turner. Probably because if the heat was off McDougall, everybody would be laughing at them.

I don't agree with everything the guy has done - for example his attack on the Jellybaby Pirates - but generally I think he does an efficient, if somewhat pedantic, job. He is a bureaucrat, remember.

All I'm really saying is: give the guy a fair go and save the criticisms for where they are justified.

LET'S PUT IT RIGHT

Dear Mr Craccum,

In reply to John Manson's letter in 12 April issue: You beauty ravehead!!

The varsity parking situation has definitely reached immoral levels. Day after day we are forced to choke on the sight of towies (and ALL Traffic Dept 'personnel') FORCIBLY REMOVING the ways and means (for so many) of A.U. student transport.

This must stop! How much more can we take? Student sanity is being played with as we witness the unrelenting blitz by meter slaves with a destructive (psychologically) attitude of 'come-hell-or-high-water-you-are-going-to-get-a-damned-ticket-even-if-you-have-to-be-towed-into-an-illegal-park.'

The whole crux of this issue is parking - and some students have to drive to varsity. Most are doing the community a favour (long term) by studying here.

So why should the ACC provide financial disincentives (we are already under financed anyway). Students are being reduced to using low cunning and primitive physics to test how much force (from a tree that annoys-and-beautifies) car panels can take before denting - parking is literally squeezed.

Students let the majority interest rule - if you have been stomped on, put down or just towed away, say so!

PUSHED TO THE LIMIT -
Bryce New

ED.(Gort): I agree wholeheartedly with everyone who has realised that parking availability near varsity is absolutely diabolical. Something must be done about it soon.

A.J. SAYS 'FUCK YOU'

The Editor,

Contrary to popular belief a baby is not a nuisance but a gift from God. If a couple love each other so much as to make love, then surely the resulting child is confirmation of their love.

So many of this world's finest men gave their lives to ensure our safe and secure future. But some of us (approx. 10000/yr) are unwilling to reciprocate their generosity by giving up 6 months of our lives. Imagine if they all said 'Fuck You' (Quote: Lois Easton), we would all have slanted eyes and be chanting the benefits (however few) of communism.

Our selfish acts of promiscuity, homosexuality and abortion have not only created revolting sexual diseases but also acceptance of killing babies. The Bible says 'thou shalt not kill' but we like to bend the rules to promote our self-interests. What will happen on judgment day to those of us having and procuring abortions? If we're lucky, we may hear a 'Fuck You' as we pass through the depths of/to Hell.

CRONYISM

Dear Craccum,

In reply to your correspondent David Ward, one of the organisers of Careers 88.

David claims that no decision has been made on who will distribute this publication. Mark Barlow, the other organiser has stated that the 76th Imperial Roman Legion Club, of which he is President, will be doing the distribution, and being paid for it. He has made this claim at his club's AGM, on his club's application for a club grant, and personally to me.

It would be pointless for me to warn students of this blatant cronyism after the fact! I warn all students of the actions of the Education Vice-President that you have elected and to whom you pay an honoraria.

It is correct to say that advertisers will fund Careers 88, IF it runs as planned. If NOT, then students will bear the costs. Furthermore, students are providing the money up-front to fund this venture, which the organisers will take a share of any surplus! So I stand by my claim that student money is required, (else why do it through your Student Association?), and the organisers have a duty to see that the money is not given away to 'those in the know' while ordinary students never have a chance at earning any of it!

Yours faithfully,
W.W. McDougall
AUSA TREASURER

PUT UP OR SHUT UP

Dear Craccum,

I'm writing to respond to the infantile remarks made Rave On 19.4.88 by A Sadly Disorientated Member and Pip & Suz. I've been trying hard for the last year to be conciliatory towards boneheads like this, but I think it's time they were told a bit about how we feel about their selfish attitudes.

So, you think the Union is out of touch and incompetent - fair enough, maybe it is, have you ever approached an Exec. member to give them your opinion on ANYTHING? So, you want efficient, cost effective and creative management, have you ever spoken to Wayne MacDougall about it, did you take the time to vote on a referendum motion concerning the future of $1,500,000 worth of housing which belongs to you? (I'd have to be bloody busy with lectures not to find time to spend 4 minutes putting pen to paper about $1,500,000 worth of MY assets). So, we aren't representative of you, did you ever consider standing or encouraging a friend to, or perhaps even voting?

Pip and Suz, I'm sorry to hear you would have loved to stay and see what goes on but you had a 2 o'clock lecture. I'm sorry you made the sensible decision to go and secure your personal future rather than miss one single lecture for the sake of taking an interest in YOUR Association. Last year, to give you one single example, many of us missed heaps of lectures because we thought it was important to get the catering dispute settled so that people like you could have food available, but without having to pay an enormous price for it. I could go on and give other examples, but what I'm saying is put up or shut up - if you care about your Association you have to be prepared to take an interest.

Perhaps the decentralised model the AUES have shown us is the way for the future, fair enough, but bear in mind that that kind of Association would require active support from a hell of a lot of people, are they out there? If so maybe they should put a little effort into the Association they have before they give up.

Strange as it may seem, I still care about the Association, but I see it as a Union within which students can join together in their common interest. If you want a good Association, if you care about it, come and talk to me or to somebody who's still on Exec., but if you just want to sit and bleat, then pick on the weather or on your all-important University courses, because we've had a gutsful.

Ex-SRC Chair

WEALTH SHARE

Dear Craccum,

I read with interest David Shearers letter to Craccum in Issue 7. It is a great pity to me that more people cannot see what David sees so clearly. I hope David will not mind if I develop his point further, to it's logical conclusion.

He says 'the poor remain poor and the rich stay rich'. In a free market economy, the poor DO remain poor AND grow in number! The rich who remain rich decline in number. The result is the current situation in the U.S.A. where 10% of the population control 86% of the wealth. At the other end of the scale 55% of the population have nothing nor any real chance of improving their position.

To this situation let's add NATIONALISM. As all history students know, Nationalism has been the biggest driving force in the world since 1945. Akin to NATIONALISM is a sense of injustice which creates the frustration and anger that acts as a detonator.

Now let's add these two different concepts together with people - NEW ZEALAND people. We need to find a group of people who are into Nationalism and have a sense of injustice. A group who can point to a history of oppression, high unemployment, poor education success, high crime rates, poor housing, little sympathy in high places, and a difficulty grasping the concepts of another cultures super-imposed society (and view of the future!) and on top of all this, dump the free market economy - which will forever doom these people to the bottom of the socio-economic ladder in their own country.

I wonder where Lange, Douglas and co think REVOLUTIONS come from?? Just how much will a group absorb before the country suffers a backlash? In a very few number of years, one in two children in all NZ schools will be non-EUROPEAN. This current society is going to fail them and their reaction will be predictable. And when New Zealand suffers this fate, as has every nation that develops this situation, just what will be the politicians answer?

David Shearer makes a valid point with which to finish. 'the economic system of a country exists to serve the people of the nation.... the economy is a means to an end.... the end being the health of the nation. THE HEALTH OF THE ECONOMY IS NOT AN END IN ITSELF!

The current policy, and supporters of it, may well improve the health of the economy but the health of the nation may suffer an irreversible demise.

Yours sincerely,
J.T.

A.U.E.S. NOT ISOLATED

W.W. McDougall,
A.U.S.A. Treasurer.

Dear Sir,

I am an engineering student. The move by the A.U.E.S. to obtain more of the monies which engineering students pay by way of A.U.S.A. fees can be viewed in any way which you choose. It would, however, be unwise to view such a move as being an isolated occurrence.

It should be remembered that university students continue to pay ever-increasing amounts of money for their tertiary education; this trend is not likely to abate. It is, therefore, in the interests of students, either now or in the future, to become more concerned about all of the costs of their education. This means that the action of the A.U.E.S. is not likely to be an isolated event on the N.Z. campus scene but, more likely, it is probably an indication of things to come.

N.Z. is in the midst of economic and social disarray. The 'bottom' line has now become a very important consideration of almost every business. As you stated in 'Craccum', April 12th 1988, p 11, A.U.S.A. is partly involved in running businesses so it should be concerned about the current economic climate. In particular, there is no concrete reason why A.U.S.A. should be immune to the current economic realities; it may well have to accept income cuts in either the immediate or mid-term future.

An important point to remember is that a reduction in the A.U.S.A. income will probably force the Association to reconsider what its prime functions might be. This should be ultimately reflected in the services to students which remain after income cuts. Surely this cannot be entirely deleterious; after all, it is possible to maintain an essential core of services to the bulk of students even with income cuts.

Yours sincerely,
T.M. Van Noort

WAYNE REPLIES:

I agree entirely, although I'd point out that the cost of your fees have decreased by 25% in real terms, since the last increase.

The key issue in your letter is who is to determine what are the 'essential core of services'. I cannot, you cannot, and nor can Executive. Only the majority of students, through the authority of a General Meeting, or a referendum, change the current policy that dictates what services we provide. All I am trying to do is encourage people to make those changes. What are your suggestions for an 'essential core'. Write to Craccum, let's have debate, and then we can suggest these policy changes at the Winter General Meeting!

SHERYL TO DAVID

Dear David Shearer,

In your letter in Issue 7, you claim that there are no right or wrong economic systems. That economics merely theorises as to what effects a particular system will have. Well, surely, the economic system which produces the best effects is the right system. You cannot claim that there are no right or wrong economic systems, while spending three quarters of the same letter trying to convince me that socialism is the right economic system.

Not surprisingly, you did not convince me. I have pointed out before that it is only in a free society that the poor have the opportunity to break out of their 'cycle of poverty'. For instance, witness the immigrants to America in the 19th and the early 20th century. The vast improvement in their lives would not have been possible in a socialist society and is becoming increasingly difficult in the mixed economy of today's America.

All of this is, however, a side issue, albeit an important one. The prime importance of capitalism and the main reason why I advocate it, is the fact that capitalism is the only system where the freedom of the individual is paramount. Implicitly at least, in a capitalist society a person has the right to exist for their own sake. It is the only social system where a rational man is free to think and free to act. The only restrictions placed on him are those of reality and the obligation not to infringe upon the rights of others.

Sheryl Jackson

SHERYL TO DAPHNA

Dear Craccum,

Daphna Whitmore has not even attempted to discuss the issues that I raised in my article 'Capitalism - the other view'. Her entire argument consists of hurling the adjective 'bourgeois' at me. How anyone can use this word in the 1980's with a straight face is beyond me. You have not proved anything yet Daphna, except perhaps, that you are an anachronism.

Considering that the Soviet Union treats its citizens as feudal serfs and chattels of the state, I find it quite ironic that you view feudalism as a poor social system. That's exactly where your Marxist policies and principles are leading us to, Daphna - serfdom.

EXEC MEMBERS :- PAST AND PRESENT

Well hey, fellow students. Here's a simple sort of puzzle for you to muse over in the next week. It's called 'Spot the Exec Member'. In each of the accompanying photos there is a current or past Exec personality (one photo actually has 2 of them) in typical poses. No prizes for getting them all right, just pat yourself on the back and congratulate yourself at being so clever, and old!

The first photo here (left) shows a recent C.A.O. being cultural beyond the call of duty. He has occasionally been seen dressed normally, but he is more usually seen in attire such as this, though the wig is a little extreme even for him. The scene of the crime in this instance is the Auckland Stock Exchange building earlier this year where our hero was asked to portray a bad guy in a video nasty (sort of) complete with realistic-looking gun(!), much to the amusement of the onlookers including several noisy students heckling from the balcony. An easy one for you to start with.

This one (right) is pretty tricky unless you've been around AUSA for a few years. The 'Black Adder' who looks like he is doing disgusting things with a signpost is a former EVP and SRC Chair. The photographer is an ex-AVP and is actually now a graduate! The scene is Houhora, the site of NZ's northernmost pub and is taken towards the end of a rather lengthy pub crawl, which may explain some of the strange activities that occurred by late afternoon, as you can plainly see.

I would also point out that this was the same crawl where the Herekino Kid was christened, and where several drunk LIONZ members were almost beaten up because of the activities of one member in particular who managed to avoid being photographed most of the time including here. Just think, if you join LIONZ you too can travel round the country getting pissed, nearly getting your face smashed in and have yourself spread all over Craccum, oo er.

And now for someone incredibly simple; to identify that is. Especially if you're young and female, many of you no doubt have seen your current EVP in this position, or something similar, though probably not as many of you as he would have us believe. One other publication even went so far as to recently publish some of your names, but this has apparently had no ill-effect on his activities, and it hasn't even deterred his current girlfriend who must surely hold the record for longevity let alone less favourable characteristics.

The scene is Shadows, if you couldn't tell, and was taken on (I think) the very first day it was open this year. Start as you mean to continue, and he certainly has. Frequently in, and sometimes out, of his toga he can be found at almost any function where there is lots of cheap alcohol and young women, so be warned there's bound to be a repeat performance of this pose before too long. He was actually very fortunate when this was taken that the toga was adjusted by a couple of young 'ladies' present to offer a rather more revealing pose! Maybe next time?

And now for the lucky last. This particular scene has been repeated on so many different occasions in the last fifteen or so years that you'd almost need to have a Ph.D. to be able to keep track of them. This particular shot of your President was taken at a 'last drink at the Kiwi' earlier this year. (In fact the developers have taken so bloody long to do any actual developing that T.T.N. day was started there on April 27th when a virtually identical scene to the one pictured was in progress. Indeed, the loss of the Kiwi has meant several changes to the venues of some of Capping's more popular events this year. There'll be just as much drinking as before, only in different places; expect the Prez to be at all of them as usual, providing he doesn't accidentally recover from a hangover one night.

That's all folks. Hope it gives you something to talk to each of those pictured about, it should be quite easy to hassle them as only one of them knows that his picture is in here, won't the others be surprised? Hopefully there will be even more of these candid snaps at a future date(s).

JESUS' INCOMPATIBILITIES

Dear Craccum,
J. Beazer claims that 'the New Testament [was] written between A.D. 40 to A.D. 100'.
Actually, it was composed c. 50-150 AD (understanding the N.T., H.C. Kee).

The earliest part is 1 Thess, written by Paul c. 50-52 AD. The latest parts are 2 Peter, 1-12 Tim and Titus, all composed c. 130-150 AD.

They weren't assembled as the New Testament until 367 AD.

Yeshu died c. 30-33 AD. Paul composed his seven epistles (the others are forgeries) c. 50-64 AD.

Even at the earliest source on Yeshu, we strike an author who:

- 1) Was writing 20-34 years after Yeshu's death.
- 2) Had no interest in Yeshu's biographical details
- 3) Had never met Yeshu when he was alive!

J. Beazer provides what (s)he believes is convincing proof that Yeshu was resurrected.

As his/her ultimate sources, (s)he uses the four canonical gospels.

These are Mark (70-75 AD), Luke (70-90 AD), Matthew (80-100 AD), and John (90-110 AD).

The actual authors are completely unknown and each had more than one author who were in turn separated in time.

The resurrection stories contradict.

Was it one (John), two (Matt.), three (Mark), or four or more (Luke) woman/women who go to the tomb? Was there one man sitting (Mark) or two men standing (Luke) inside the tomb? Did one angel appear outside the tomb (Matt), or were two angels sitting inside the tomb (John)?

Was the stone already rolled away when the woman/women arrived (Mark, Luke, John) or did an angel appear in front of two women and roll it away (Matt)?

Did two women meet Yeshu, on their way to the disciples (Matt), or did one woman meet him just outside the tomb (John)?

The four versions are clearly incompatible. So - take heart fellow non-Christians! don't be deceived by pseudo-logical arguments for Yeshu's alleged divinity.

Yeshu was an itinerate healer/preacher of the Jewish faith, executed by the Romans (without the complicity of the Jews) who (wrongly) believed him to be a threat to their rule.

I'll leave the final word to Paul Blanshard ('Some of my best friends are Christians').

'The more one studies the life of Jesus, the more one is forced toward a rather startling conclusion. Jesus was not a Christian. He was a reforming Jew, who remained a reforming Jew to the end. He believed finally that he was the Messiah of the Jews (sic), and he continued to worship the Jewish God and observe most of the Jewish law. Paul's Christianity was a post-Jesus Christianity, a religion about Jesus which finally triumphed over the religion of Jesus'.

(Mr.) C.C. McDowell

GOLF ON WEDNESDAY

Dear Craccum,
Pip and Suz, (Craccum 19/4) seem to regard 31 hours per week as a hard workload. Sorry girls, but as a house surgeon, a group constantly being asked to stand tall in the community, I have to tell you it only gets worse. By the time you are working 60 or more hours a week, you are often looking back at the good old days of BHB. Believe me, things are pretty bad when one no longer has time to play golf on Wednesday afternoons, although at least the Merc's boot has room for all the clubs.

Yours in Hippocrates,
Dr M. Tamatea

CRAIG IN CANADA

Dear Craccum,
Thanks for your interest in my being. I am writing to deny any allegations that I'm nothing more than a plastic facsimile thereof. Thank you 'Y FRONT', but as pointed out by 'A. NASH', I'm for real, and it's chilli nor curry (the cultural ramifications are unthinkable).

My quest in Canada has not been completed, nothing here has yet to compare to Shadows flat ale (thank God). I shall continue to stay up in the Great White North until I find a successor to 'Yucca Flux'. I have field tested many new types and have even been forced to do extensive trials and cross-correlations - but as yet I can't be sure so I'm staying on a little longer (at the bar).

Just to make sure I don't lose touch with the student body (Carl get your mind out of the gutter) I have infiltrated the U.B.C. student paper. They give me free dinners (real food, not Budgie meals) and I tell them how conservative they are.

Must dash, got a revolution to run.

Derek Craig

ED'S NOTE: If you wish to write to the person claiming to be Derek Craig, we have his supposed address in Canada, although strangely enough it is on a University of Auckland letter, but with an authentic-looking Canadian stamp and postmark.

IGNORANCE OF A DOG

Dear Craccum,
I have just read the article 'New Times Old Methods', which appeared in your last week's edition. This smut transcends the ignorance of a dog. But yet, I find it increasingly difficult to believe that the people responsible for this hate-propaganda are in fact ignorant at all. I believe that they are acutely aware that to compare Israel with Nazi Germany is the most effective way to hurt Jews. It does more than just defame the memory of our families and communities lost in the holocaust. For Jews the holocaust is a personal tragedy, that effects all our lives individually and directly.

If Israel had pursued a policy so much as one tenth as vicious as the Nazi's, the last Palestinian would have died years ago. In February 1982 the Syrian government put down a rebellion in the city of Hama. They bombarded the city for several days, killing an estimated 20,000 civilians. The world had no moral outrage or (self) righteous indignation to spare for the Hamaites. It wouldn't be sensible to compare even this atrocity to the Holocaust, not because the tragedy is less painful to those involved, but because it stands by itself as a tragedy of a different nature. It doesn't have to be reinforced by another evil. Israel's actions against the Palestinians, which amounts at worst - to a lot of hot heads beating the crap out of a lot of other hot heads, if it is to inspire the hatred the writer of 'Slings and Arrows' would wish, of course needs to be bolstered by other, disconnected evils. This is why about 70%+ of the article dealt with the Nazi's, rather than with the Israelis.

Come to think of it, the anti-Israel campaign of the 'Friends' of Palestine is almost entirely based on comparing Israel to something else. If they are genuinely concerned about the welfare of the Palestinians, then why don't they deal with that issue? Smearing Israel doesn't help anyone (except the P.O.O. which has never done a thing for the Palestinian people anyway).

I am prepared to argue and debate with these people, if they are prepared to defend their case in a mature, reasonable manner. But I cannot tolerate racist slurs against Israel and the Jewish people. I demand that 'Archer' or whoever the author is, makes a public apology.

With 'Friends' like these, Palestine doesn't need enemies.

FENDERED FALCON

Dear Bastard,
On Tuesday 26th, I sat my first calculus terms test, my day was capped off when I got back to my car.

Thank you for the crease your black plastic bumper left in the front wing of my Falcon. If I ever find out who you are I am going to take you barefoot water-skiing behind said Falcon.

Die Yuppie Die
Hoping Your Transmission Fails,
A. Armiger

P.S. My sympathies to the owner of the mauled Mini in the other week's issue.

YOU DICK!

Hi Si,
Boy, are you a tit. Fuck going to a yuppie pub, get real bud. And if there is a lack of seating in Shadows, it does not necessarily mean that there is a lack of chairs (which there is in fact, but I know that more are 'on the way'), it just means that the wrong people are in them, like jumped up, noisy, pretentious, obnoxious first years. Those of us that can barely remember our 21sts surely deserve a seat more than they do, after all we spend more money there, are polite to the staff and are far more careful about spilling precious alcohol or, God forbid, breaking a glass.

If you had been here last year you would have seen more people having a good time, as opposed to just getting completely shit-faced, AND there was much less need for security because there weren't so many fuck-wits around (getting a bit repetitive, but it's obvious innit?). Sure, everyone has the right to drink at Shadows but it's not a teeny-bopper party venue, having a good time doesn't mean you give all your responsibilities a big miss. There's no need to act younger than you are if you're still just a bloody kid anyway! I could rave on longer but I'm getting thirsty so I better race off to Shadows and get a seat before some prat or gorous barely-legal female gets it.

Yours, never, never seen dead in pastel,

Cyril 'looking for a laxative' frog
P.S. At least someone replied to my intentionally shit-stirring letter, maybe the juveniles were too pissed to.

NO CHOICE

Dear Craccum,
I have no choice - as a fellow AUSA member, but to agree with 'Sadly Disorientated Member' - Craccum April 19th (although I must ponder on the choice on non-deplume) - however his/her observations are painfully perceptive. I sympathise with those of the AUSA and the SRC executives and they are still students and can't be expected to be brilliant mathematicians or business managers but we do expect a certain level of competence from those mishandling our money.

SDM mentions one particularly valid point in that the Medical & Engineering students are going to have a great deal of company soon if the powers that be don't pull their fingers out and clean up their act. I don't condone what the engineers did - it was for the most part selfish, but it is also understandable and as usual the engineers just went the wrong way about it.

I'm an Arch. student and I feel we as a school would be better off by ourselves, and I would feel my contribution to the university would be better used if handled by my fellow students. This is not a threat - merely, a possibility.

There are over 14,000 students at the Uni, so why is our money being governed by a few individuals hell bent on proving their incompetence. I put forward the following suggestions:

- 1) Don't let Graham Hackshaw resign as Chair of the SRC - nobody's perfect but he has the drive and commitment needed.
- 2) Who the hell let Wally 'apty named' Watson back into the University - let alone the Students Assoc!?! - Surely by now everyone realises he spouts more than enough shit to guarantee himself a future political position, wouldn't we be better off with someone we can trust and understand.
- 3) How could I not mention Wayne McDougall? I'm not going to question his abilities as treasurer, however is there any way to keep him doing his job only and let others get on with theirs.
- 4) And finally Mark Barlow - need I say anything - I guess there needs to be someone we can all laugh at.

So before we lose complete faith in not only the University, but in the students too, can we call for a complete review of the Association and a movement towards re-accessing the structure and power allotment within the Association.

We as students need to have some control over our money and those 'elected'?!?! to govern over it.

Mardia Williams

GETTING IT STRAIGHT

Dearest RIP & Frankie,
Re your correspondence received at the Craccum office Tuesday afternoon, a few points:

- 1) We don't necessarily have to be 'in the Craccum office' as we have our spies everywhere and besides dozens of people pass through there every day.
- 2) My alias used in the last letter was misspelled by some cretin up in that office, it should be The Herekino Kid as a result of an unpleasant experience whilst pubcrawling up north last year.
- 3) Neither I nor Nursie is a dwarf or a neanderthal, though we are both of a somewhat 'sporty' (oo er) nature.
- 4) Perhaps we weren't who you were trying to get in touch with in your original letter, but as they are obviously illiterate or stupid (I've seen you, and I certainly thought you were worth replying to!), we've decided to take up the challenge(?!).
- 5) My friend Nursie (aka The Catholic Tax!Dodging Air Commodore) leaves for overseas in just 2 1/2 weeks, would you deny him the pleasure of your company as a going away present? Perhaps we'll see you at his farewell party?
- 6) As your latest letter arrived by special courier it can only mean that you're shy, chicken or teasing. What's the story, is the peresistence kick just for the guys? What happened to equality?

Yours expectantly,
The Herekino Kid
(aka Mon(Desir) Man)

LATE NEWS: I now have written confirmation of where and when Nursie's final piss-up will be. Be there, or be boring.

REPLIES

Ri Weal: I would like to print your letter, but some words are illegible. Decipher it for me and I'll print it a.s.a.p.

William Boot: Sorry pal, you've had your lot. Try later next term, and make it INTERESTING.

CHAPLAINS CHAT

HERSTORY

The other day I was given a book. The title drew me: 'Birthed From the Womb of God' A Lectionary for Women by Rev Dorothy Harvey. As I flicked through it I found myself getting more and more engrossed.

All through I found references to stories of women from scripture and Christian tradition - many of whom I couldn't remember hearing of before! On reflection I realised that there was a lot I knew of the Fathers of faith, the male prophets and leaders.... Abraham, Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Paul.... But these women?

What of the stories of Ruth, Naomi, Esther, Rahab, Rachel, Tamar, Tabitha, Lydia... As I read on I came across great women mystics and prophetesses such as Hildegard of Bingen and Mechthild of Magdeburg of the 11th and 12th centuries.

And I began to wonder about other great women... Julian of Norwich, Teresa of Avila, Catherine of Sienna...

It dawned on me....

Hidden in our history there is a 'HERSTORY'; a great tradition of women mystics, teachers, leaders, prophetesses, critics, formers of faith. I have a thirst to search out more of these women who have gone before, - the women in my Christian family tree.
